A DAY OF COMRADESHIP

WHOLE COUNTRY RESPONDS

Provost Marshal General Crowder Gets Reports That There Was No Hitch Anywhere.

America's millions of new selective draft registrants include 763,088 New Yorkers according to official returns received at the office of Draft Director Martin Conboy early this morning. Mr. Conboy said that he expected the revised figures, which would be available this afternoon, to show that the registration in this city had reached 800,000. It is believed that the total registration for the nation will approach, if not pass, the 13,000,000 mark, although Provost Marshal General Crowder does not expect to have the figures ready for publication before some time tomorrow. Reports received in Washington by General Crowder last night indicated that everywhere the registration was accomplished without a hitch of any kind and that the expectations of the War Department would be realized.

In New York City there was no disorder of any kind. To the vast majority of registrants it was a joyous opportunity to prove their loyalty to the country in the hour of need. The banner district for the entire city was the 149th, in Manhattan, with a registration of 6,851. Second honors went to District 144, also in Manhattan, with 6,644 registrants. The banner Brooklyn district was No. 28, with a registration of 5,779, while in the Bronx first honors went to District 13, with 6,113.

The total registration for Manhattan was 336,419; for Brooklyn, 258,036; the Bronx, 95,330; Queens, 58,761, and Richmond, 14,542.

Most of them in New York's selective draft army registered early. At 6 o'clock yesterday morning, an hour before the registration places opened, it was estimated that 100,000 men were lined up in front of the 1,100 registration offices in the city. Fully half of the registrants had signed their names to the little red registration cards by 11 o'clock.

With few exceptions the work of registering proceeded without a hitch, the average time to register a man, in cases where interpreters were not necessary, being about one and one-half minutes.

There was no gloom anywhere in New York yesterday. Everywhere the boys of 18 and 19 and the older fellows in the 30s and 40s stepped forward briskly, and with a smile to answer the questions and sign the little cards while rendered them liable to serve in the military forces of the United States.

From end to end of the city it was a day of comradeship. Everybody was happy and proud to be of the great army that was signing for service. That it was the most democratic affair New York has ever known was the verdict of all concerned, and the police said that they had never known an occasion of such magnitude in which there was so little disorder. The banker rubbed elbows with the laborer, the preacher and the sport talked about the weather, the actor jostled the truck driver, the college boy joked the old fellows because they were, as he put it, too old to get "over there" soon.

Hardest Worked Boards.

The hardest worked registration boards were those on the lower East Side, the upper East Side in Manhattan, parts of the Bronx, and in certain sections of Brooklyn, where people of every tongue and race make their homes. It was in these districts where the registration had to be accomplished with the aid of interpreters. In some districts from twenty to thirty different kinds of interpreters were on duty. In these districts the time required to register a man ranged all the way from four to fifteen minutes.

There were more than 500 men, representing a dozen different races, in line at the central registration office of Local Board 108 in Public School 65, at Canal and Forsyth Streets, when that registration place opened at 7 A. M., while it was estimated that fully 1,500 were in line in front of the headquarters of Board 109 at Ludlow and Canal Streets an hour before the registration began. So many of these men were unable to speak English that six policemen were detailed to this district, while interpreters went up and down the line, answering questions and giving last minute instructions to the registrants.

On the upper west side, between 125th Street and Seventy-second Street, the registrants included a large number of college boys under 21 years. In most instances these youngsters made it plain that the sooner they got to the front the better pleased they would be.

The Bronx County Court House was, with the exception of a few offices, given over to the registration. At 7 o'clock its corridors were jammed, while the crowd outside extended a block in either direction. Draft officials estimated that fully one-third of the eligi-

Gen. Huhn and Most of Staff Killed by British Aviators

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 12, (Dispatch to The London Daily Express.)—The Hamburger Fremdenblatt announces that General Hugo Huhn has been killed near St. Quentin.

A dispatch from Basle says a majority of the General's staff were shot down by British aviators last week, and other Generals had narrow escapes.

FIND DEBS GUILTY OF DISLOYAL ACTS

SATISFIED WITH THE TRIAL

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 12.—Eugene V. Debs, four times Socialist candidate for President of the United States, today was found guilty on three counts of violation of the Espionage act. The penalty on each count is twenty years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000. In the event of an adverse decision on his counsel's motion for a new trial, Debs probably will be sentenced Saturday morning immediately after the motion has been disposed of.

Seymour Stedman, leading counsel for the defense, gave notice of appeal, the grounds of which will be "admission of incompetent evidence" and "failure of the indictment properly to charge the offense."

United States District Judge Westenhaver intimated today that if he overruled the motion for a new trial he might make it a condition of defendant's bail that he obey the law pending the appeal. While not announcing a definite decision on the question of conditional bail, the Judge said he was "inclined to think he ought to make the condition" in view of the defendant's actions and attitude since his indictment.

The jury retired to consider its verdict at 11:12 o'clock this morning and did not announce its decision until 5:05 this evening.

Found Guilty on Three Counts.

The counts on which Debs was found guilty are:

Attempting to incite insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny, and refusal of duty in the military and naval forces;

Obstructing and attempting to obstruct the recruiting and enlistment service;

Uttering language intended to incite, provoke, and encourage resistance to the United States and to promote the cause of the enemy.

The only count left to the discretion of the jury on which it found Debs "not guilty" was the tenth, charging "opposition to the cause of the United States." At the direction of the Judge, the jury returned "not guilty" verdicts to counts 6 and 8, charging defendant with "uttering language intended to bring the form of government, Constitution, military and naval forces, the flag, and the uniform into contempt, scorn, contumely, and disrepute," and with "urging, inciting, and advocating the curtailment of the production of war necessaries." The four remaining counts of the ten originally contained in the indictment had previously been nolled on advice of Federal officials.

Verdict Interrupts Story Telling.

The return of the jury, nearly six hours after its retirement, interrupted Debs when he was half way through telling one of several typical Lincoln stories with which he was entertaining counsel and some of his friends. When Foreman Cyrus Stoner and the other jurors filed back into court Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes took a seat beside the veteran Socialist leader. With one hand locked between the hands of Mrs. Stokes, Debs, as calm and imperturbable as he had been throughout the trial, awaited the reading of the verdict.

"In God's good time it will all come right," the defendant said, and the salutations of his sympathizers were those of congratulation rather than sorrow.

Outside the courtroom a girl pushed a bunch of flowers into Debs' outstretched hands. Then she fell, half fainting, into his arms. Debs stooped down and kissed her.

"I haven't one word of complaint either against the verdict or the trial," the defendant asserted. "The evidence was truthful, it was fairly presented by

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES, Sept. 12.—A number of minor actions, outpost skirmishes, raids, and local counterattacks took place last night and this morning along the fronts of the British First, Third, and Fourth Armies between La Bassée and the country east of Péronne; that is to say, on a line of nearly forty-four miles.

The weather conditions were bad for the men. After a cold, wet night, when the soldiers lying out in the open were drenched to the skin and felt the wind like a knifeblade, there was a violent thunderstorm this morning, followed by slashing rain which lasted for hours, but is now clearing.

The storm began suddenly with a vivid flash of lightning, which rent the clouds, and a tremendous crash of thunder, so startling that it seemed like the beginning of a big bombardment.

I went up into the area of the First Army among the mining villages on the British side of Lens, below Bethune, the grimiest and most squalid part of the British front, which has hardly altered its line during four years of war, and where now in places like Vermelles and Maroc and Bully, Grenay and Philosophe and Le Rutdire Farm—names which have a sinister meaning to thousands of British soldiers—there is the same old harassing fire as made men watch their steps this way four Winters ago, and have done so ever since.

I have described the country often, with its black conical slag heaps and pitheads and miners' cottages with red tiled roofs, (where any tiles or roofs are left, and on such a day as this they look their ugliest, with the rain beating on the cobblestones and pouring through the holes and broken timber of shelled houses and washing coaldust in gullies down the slag heaps, and spreading a wet blanket of mist over the smoke rising thickly from factory chimneys on the edge of the fighting zone.

Savage-looking rain clouds lay low on the heights of Notre Dame de Lorette and Vimy Ridge, dark barriers on our side of Lens, where the enemy is still in strength with nests of machine guns, and between the clouds there were lakes of greenish light, like electric fluid.

Women and Children in Villages.

Drab women with shawls about their heads, and bare-headed children grubby with their play among the slag heaps, went pattering down the streets of the villages, never far enough behind our lines to escape scot free from the enemy's high velocities or visits of his bombing squadrons, so that these people live always with a menace over them among the ruins of their neighbors' houses, while down the roads beyond went our transport wagons and gun teams and staff cars and pack mules with the rain swishing down waterproof coats and beating on steel hats and spraying up to the axles of wagon wheels.

Germany Might Restore Belgium Vice Chancellor von Payer Says

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 12.—That Germany might restore Belgium, without conditions or indemnities, in case no other country would be better situated as regards Belgium than Germany, was the belief expressed today by Friedrich von Payer, Imperial Vice Chancellor of Germany, in a speech at Stuttgart. He was discussing the depression felt in Germany and in the countries allied with Germany, which he attributed not to recent military events, but to the prospect of a fifth war Winter.

"If we could be sure that no other country would be better situated as regards Belgium than ourselves," said Herr von Payer, "I believe I could venture to say that Belgium could be restored without conditions and without indemnities."

With regard to the appearance of American troops in the war the Vice Chancellor said:

"Nobody will deny that the cooperation of the American troops on the front means a heavy and ever-increasing burden for us. Our enemies, however, forget that, if the Americans now appear by hundreds of thousands at the front, we have already put millions of Russians, Serbians, and Rumanians out of action, and the Entente will not succeed in winning them back for their own purposes."

BRITISH STRIKE TOWARD CAMBRAI

Vermand and Two Other Towns Are Taken in Co-operation with French.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Important progress toward Cambrai was made today by the British, who captured the villages of Havrincourt, Moeuvres, and Trescault, reaching their old positions at several points, crossing the Canal du Nord north of Havrincourt and taking about 1,000 prisoners.

These operations advaanced the line half a mile on a front of three and a half miles in region vital to the defense of the city.

On the front northwest of St. Quentin Haig's forces have occupied the villages of Vermand, Vendelles, and Attilly, the last about five miles from the German stronghold.

Co-operating with the British on their left, French troops today pushed their lines eastward as far as Holnon-Savy Road, where they are only three miles west of St. Quentin.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 12, (Associated Press.)—British troops stormed their way today into the shell-shattered town of Havrincourt, which lies on a dominating ridge within the forward defenses of the Hindenburg line, and at latest reports were maintaining their hold on this highly important place.

A little to the south they also carried Trescault by assault, thereby gaining a still firmer grip on the high ground dominating this region. Fighting was still proceeding this afternoon, and about 300 German prisoners have been sent back to the cages.

The attack was begun this morning in the midst of rain, which has been falling intermittently for several days. Because of the elevation of this ridge, however, the ground was not in a particularly bad condition. The operation was a local one, restricted to the capture of positions of the Havrincourt-Trescault sector. This was the only important action reported on the British front today.

A further improvement of the British line north and southeast of Attilly, to the west of St. Quentin, was achieved late yesterday by attacks which met with comparatively slight resistance from the hard-pressed Germans. Dominating high ground was the objective which the attacking forces sought and won.

Last evening the British also attacked against considerable opposition and established posts west of the Canal du Nord at Moeuvres and for some distance northward.

Hard local fighting occurred yesterday at Hesbecourt, to the north of the Vermand sector, where the enemy attacked after a heavy artillery preparation for the purpose of regaining ground that had been captured by the British earlier in the day. Some advanced posts were abandoned to the Germans, but the assault brought about little change in the situation.

West of Gouzeaucourt the enemy also essayed an advance, but was thrown back.

Last night the Germans heavily bombarded Gouzeaucourt Wood and several other points in this sector with gas shells.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept 12.—The First American Army has attacked the St. Mihiel salient from all sides.

Following four hours' intense artillery preparation, we took the offensive between the Moselle and the Meuse at 5 o'clock, and an hour later the whole movement was in progress over a front of nearly 50 kilometers (30 miles.)

The American troops have taken possession of Aprémont, Richecourt, Lahyville, St. Bussant, the Bois de Mortmare, and the southern part of the Forest of Vencheres. The advance continues on the whole salient. On the west side our troops have made good progress.

From Pont-à-Mousson on the east to Fresnes, east of Verdun, on the western end we have been everywhere successful. General Pershing is in personal command of the operations.

Within the past twelve hours the St. Mihiel salient has been written into American history and has given new paragraphs to world history, for against it has been launched the first serious military effort of the United States in this war.

This operation far and away transcends anything that our troops have previously attempted. Having made good with a vengeance in aiding the French to keep Paris safe, American military effort has been turned to our own salient with a glorious initial success.

Every one knows the history of the St. Mihiel salient. A natural fortress, but pressed by the lofty Mont Sec, St. Mihiel was seized by the invading Germans in 1914, and has been held ever since. The desperate efforts of the French in 1915 failed to oust the enemy from his strongly made positions, and the salient has stuck there for four years, a thorn in the side of France. For four years the enemy has been making it stronger. Now the Americans have attacked it as their first real effort of the war.

It must remain for the official communiqué to give the exact progress, but I may say that there is considerably less of that salient now left than there was twelve hours ago.

It should be stated here that in the First American Army are fighting units of famous French shock troops, that French tanks are aiding us, and French airplanes helping our effort. But the great majority of the soldiers under the First Army standard are Americans.

Allies Hold Command of the Air.

We are using our available air service, and we have complete supremacy of the air. Not one German plane, so far as I can find out, has stuck its nose over our line today.

We have plenty of guns, plenty of ammunition, plenty of troops. It is a grand show, this first American battle.

The attack against the salient was of such a nature that two hard drives were necessary. One of these was between Pont-à-Mousson and Apremont, and the other south of Fresnes, on the west side of the salient. Both these drives were made by Americans. On the west side the attack is progressing most favorably.

The German line in this salient is

Recapture of St. Mihiel Was Effected On Fourth Anniversary of Its Loss to Germans

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 12, (Associated Press.)—St. Mihiel has been recaptured by the French, according to the unofficial information here.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—French troops, who co-operated with the Americans in their drive on the St. Mihiel salient reached the western outskirts of St. Mihiel at an early hour.

The Germans made a strong resistance, holding on with special firmness to the Romain fort [south of the city].

Yesterday was the fourth anniversary of the establishment of the St. Mihiel salient, when the Metz detachment of the Sixth German Army under the Crown Prince of Bavaria, the main army having been driven from the Grande Couronne by the Second French Army under General de Castelnau, tried to flank the latter by driving back the Third French Army under General Ruffy and gain the heights of the Meuse, from which elevations it could, in co-operation with the Imperial Crown Prince and the Fifth German Army, have enveloped Verdun.

Prince Rupprecht failed, but the salient he then established, embracing the plain of the Woevre and the basin of the Moselle, where the great German fortress of Metz is located, still remained with its vertex at St. Mihiel.

German Counter-Artillery Fire Silenced by Our Guns in 38 Minutes

Four-Hour Barrage Begun by Americans at 1 A. M.—Over the Top at Dawn and Swiftly Victorious in Drive on the St. Mihiel Salient.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 12, (morning.)—Early this morning the First American Army, assisted by certain French units, but all under the direct command of General Pershing, launched between the Moselle and the Meuse an attack with limited objectives upon a front of between thirty and thirty-seven miles.

The operation, which has for its purpose the wiping out of the St. Mihiel salient, eclipses in magnitude and importance all previous efforts of Pershing's troops in France and indubitably signalizes an entirely new phase in America's participation in the war.

It is much too early yet to give any details of the fighting proper. However, we have experienced a night of artillery preparation on a grand scale. It was at precisely 1 o'clock that the American guns unlimbered, and not since Verdun has the Valley of the Meuse known such a roar and rumble. Except close to the lines, there were not many flares against the sky, for the Autumn mists blanketed the flashes.

To one on the scene, however, the great thought is that the American Army has passed from its initial stage and has become a distinct and separate military entity, going forth to do battle on its own account. It is a proud day for the young new army from overseas, and there was not an American boy who went pressing on to the inferno of shellfire who did not accept his ordeal with a little more gallantry and a little more stoicism for the knowledge that at last his country was in the war "on its own."

Swept Over Second Line of Defenses.

NOON.—In my dispatch sent earlier today it was possible to do little more than record the fact that the American Army was engaged upon its first really large-sized independent operation in the war, and that it had taken upon itself the by no means simple task of pinching out the famous, well-fortified St. Mihiel salient, with its deep dip down between the Meuse and Moselle.

Although the details of the battle still in progress unfold themselves slowly, it is now possible, despite the lack of a general vision of the course of the entire engagement, to supply some additional information concerning the fighting.

Along a line which may be roughly described as running southwest from Pont-à-Mousson the American troops have made progress. More than half a dozen villages have passed into their hands. The resistance encountered at the first system of German defenses, without being tame, was not actually stiff, and the doughboys were able to sweep toward the second line of enemy positions ahead of their schedule.

There, however, the Germans interposed a more definite negative to the advance, and encounters of the sharpest sort began to develop. This delayed, but in no wise daunted the Americans, who valorously pushed on northward.

That these operations have proceeded so successfully augurs well for a general success.

Southward from St. Mihiel two actions which are described as strong raids have taken place. Also at several points along the heights of the Meuse the French troops have been exerting heavy pressure.

At the moment nothing presents itself with greater emphasis than the skill with which the American artillery fire was conducted. Not only did it achieve the most savage and devastating intensity, but was altogether remarkable for its accuracy. There must be that in the American character which lends itself to good gunnery.

When, fifteen minutes after the American fire had begun, the Germans attempted to make a silencing retort, it took our artillerymen precisely thirty-five minutes to blot out the enemy's counterfire; and the suppression of counterfire is the supreme test of marksmanship in modern war.

At first the flashes did not partake at all of the character of heat lightning, which they so often do, but seemed wellnigh completely lost in the air. In the darkness only the streamers of signal rockets, insistently rising, managed to penetrate with any brilliancy the overspreading murkiness, but as the hours passed the misty rain abated, leaving a horizon of perfect black to serve as background, and to hold the flares in a continuously trembling blanket of light. Finally came day and it all paled to nothingness, save only the consciousness that below as far as the eye could reach the American lads were going grimly forward in their crusader's task.

It is hardly to be presumed that further stress need be laid upon that for which the St. Mihiel salient stands. Next to Ypres it may be said to be the most famous salient on the western front.

So far, to those following the American operation, the one great spectacle has been the night of shellfire which we have just experienced. From a hillside commanding a portion of the battle scene one's every sense was, at the exact turn of 1 o'clock this morning, most ruthlessly assaulted. Upon the instant those valleys, exquisitely soft and winsome, which the Meuse and the Moselle confine, became horrifying thunderpits.

One thought no longer of the chill of the trickling Autumn rain that was falling. Nearby guns surcharged the air with concussion waves that vibrated the muscles, and distant guns, when they were at all distinguishable in the general commotion of the right, seemed more than anything else merely to point.

AMERICAN CAVALRY IN FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—American troops operating in the St. Mihiel sector made considerable gains today, General Pershing reported in his communiqué to the War Department late tonight.

Already 8,000 prisoners have been counted, and the movement still is in progress.

"Headquarters American Expeditionary Forces, Sept. 12, 1918.

"Section A. This morning our troops, operating in the St. Mihiel sector, made considerable gains. Assisted by French units, they broke the enemy's resistance and advanced at some points to a depth of five miles. We have counted 8,000 prisoners up to the present. The operation is still in progress."

Our Troops Advance Eagerly.

AMERICAN FORCES ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 12, (Reuter.)—French and American forces this morning launched an attack against the German positions on both sides of the St. Mihiel salient. It was preceded by a barrage lasting four hours.

The attack on the southern side of the salient was made along a distance of twelve miles. That on the western side was on a front of eight miles.

There had been a great concentration of Franco-American artillery, and Entente airplanes operated in large numbers.

Though undoubtedly suspicious of the intentions of the Americans in this region, the Germans were unaware at the time of the direction of the attack.

The American troops are all intensely eager and are fighting magnificently.

Far Ahead of Their Schedule.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 12, (Associated Press.)—The Americans in their St. Mihiel drive reached the first objectives at some points an hour ahead of schedule time.

By 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Americans had gained possession of the villages of Nonsard, Pannes, Bouillonville, and Thiaucourt.

All along the line the advance has been carried out on schedule. Near Maizerais the troops went ahead against machine gun fire by crawling, and tanks were sent to their aid.

Greatest Advance Five Miles.

LONDON, Sept. 12, (Associated Press.)—The Americans east of St. Mihiel this morning attacked on an eleven mile front from Fey-en-Hay to Xivray, and made an advance at its greatest depth of five miles.

Thiaucourt was captured early in the drive. From that town the battleline runs a little to the south of Bouillonville, then to Pannes and Nonsard, which were captured, to the Bois de Gargantua and north of Montsec.

North of St. Mihiel General Pershing's forces captured Combres. They are reported to have reached the western outskirts of Dommartin la Montagne.

Pershing Directed the Battle.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The first big American offensive, which began at daybreak today between the Meuse and Moselle Rivers, was conducted under General Pershing's personal supervision and was executed under orders of American officers with American soldiers. This was the first distinctly American operation of a major character launched on the western front.

PARIS, Sept. 12, (Reuter.)—American forces in the course of the last twenty-four hours have accomplished a series of bold strokes in Lorraine and in the Vosges.

American detachments made a surprise attack on the German positions at many points and penetrated the enemy lines at some places, meeting with but feeble resistance.

Having at some places reached the German support line, the Americans, in accordance with orders they had received, retired. They destroyed all the material they were unable to carry away and blew up the machine gun shelters, concrete blockhouses, and munitions depots.

German heavy shells reached isolated points, but tardily and inefficiently. The Americans in the course of these operations inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. On the whole of this front there was a sustained reciprocal bombardment.

Advance Made in Two Waves.

AMERICAN FORCES ON THE LORRAINE FRONT, Sept. 12 (Associated Press.)—American forces this morning launched an attack on the German positions, [on the St. Mihiel front.] At 9 o'clock they had progressed generally along the line. Prisoners were taken at different parts of the sector.

The first wave of American troops met with little resistance, and at 8 o'clock the second American wave was in possession of several points of the German first line.

The French and American artillery this morning directed a terrific barrage fire on the German positions. The reply of the German big guns was vigorous at some places, although as a whole it was weak.

There are some indications that the Germans are withdrawing their artillery, although it is more probable that they are going to fight hard before being driven out, after enduring a stifling barrage of more than eight hours.

Say Baker Saw Attack.

Unofficial dispatches received in New York yesterday stated that Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, was a witness of the opening of the American offensive.

WEAKENED LORRAINE FRONT.

WITH THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE, Sept. 11, (Associated Press.)—In frantic efforts to stem the tide of the allied advance the German High Command has been taking divisions out of quiet sectors around Verdun and in the Woevre and Lorraine, where they had been sent to recuperate, and has been putting them into the line after only a short rest, even though the troops needed further recuperation.

The allied military authorities have compiled some interesting information regarding the present strain on the German man power. In this connection the following schedule of work thrown upon the German troops speaks for itself:

In a certain sector four German divisions were withdrawn after five weeks. They went to a reserve area for five weeks of rest and training, and then returned to the big battle. In July, another four divisions were withdrawn after being in a quiet sector for five weeks and a half. They were allowed to train only two weeks before being engaged again.

In August, six divisions were withdrawn from a quiet sector, but it was not until they had consumed seven weeks that they were reconstituted. They were then thrown back into the battle almost immediately, and were not allowed to have a complete rest in the reserve area like the other divisions.

Thus, it is evident that, while the length of time necessary for a decimated division to recover becomes greater, the lack of effectives makes it necessary for the German High Command to engage a reconstituted division in battle without even a few days of that complete rest which is possible only in a reserve area.

The intermediate stage between a quiet sector and a battle zone has been entirely abandoned, and the troops are thrown in again immediately after rehabilitation.

The advances made yesterday by General Pershing's men and their French allies are shown in the shaded areas. The stars at various points—notably about Metz—indicate forts.

OUR ATTACK LAUNCHED WITH FLEETS OF TANKS

Infantry Follows Through the Mud, and Soon Gains Its Limited Objectives.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The Daily Mail correspondent at the American front sends the following description of the battle along the St. Mihiel sector:

"The First American Army, under personal command of General Pershing, for the first time went into action today in the St. Mihiel salient. Never before has there been such a large concentration of American troops for one operation, and never have the Americans been in such complete control of their own operations.

"The event had long been anticipated. Some people assigned to it grandiose objectives, but in reality the attack is for limited objectives only.

"The concentration of a great part of the most experienced United States troops had taken place during the last two weeks, and everything was planned minutely and with exactitude for a great American victory. Last night the final preparations were completed.

"The country over which the Americans are fighting is very difficult. The high ridges and thick woods offer every concealment for enemy machine guns, and, in addition, the Germans have a fortified line of resistance, which has everything in its favor.

"At 1 o'clock Thursday morning the artillery preparation began with a roar that could be heard many miles away, and all night it rose and fell with peculiar fluctuations. From all roads that ran parallel the flashes of innumerable guns told of the impending assault. Toward 5 o'clock—the hour of the attack—the firing became even more rapid, and its sullen tone mingled strangely with the sound of the rain.

"At dawn whole fleets of tanks, manned by strong young Americans and French, were to be seen moving out of their shelters to lead the attack. They lumbered on, but the Germans offered little opposition. The American infantry followed in open order, plowing through the mud, but they were little troubled by the feeble artillery resistance.

"At one point near Seicheprey, where the Americans had previously fought desperately with the Germans, machine-gun and automatic fire swept down upon the Yanks' right flank, but the tanks and artillery quickly moved in that direction, and the Americans went steadily forward.

"At 7 o'clock the tanks had disappeared amid a smoke cloud over the ridge in front of Seicheprey.

"The Germans have offered very little resistance to the advancing Americans. Occasionally a stray machine gun or automatic rifle has been discovered, but it is apparent that the enemy has withdrawn his main forces to a second line, which possibly he will defend with a certain degree of tenacity.

"His artillery has been firing from behind a ridge which runs in front of the American line, but he is being pursued by tanks, which at one point lost only one out of forty-five, and that stuck in the mud."

"A few prisoners of the Tenth Landwehr Division have been taken.

"The Americans are pressing forward in fine style and slowly closing in the extreme ends of the St. Mihiel salient

"At the time of telegraphing, news of what has happened is very meager, but the correspondent has just visited the battlefront and heard of the progress of the American units in the region of Montsec and Seicheprey and of the capture of several villages.

"I could see lying just below me the trench from which the Americans started and the valley through which they were fighting. The sun was streaming across the valley, casting shadows from the melancholy wrecks of villages all around. On the left was the black, forbidding heights of Montsec, with the tiny village of that name nestling on its black side. Spurts of earth sprang from its capacious sides as the American artillerymen battered at it.

"In the valley the tops of what once had been houses in the village of Richecourt were discernible when the smoke disappeared.

"Away to the right, bathed in the sunlight, was the village of St. Baussant, resting on the side of a majestic promontory. Khaki figures were moving along the valley. The smoke occasionally blotted them from view, but they would reappear soon afterward, walking with easy strides.

"Meanwhile the air was rent with the torrent of shells passing overhead. American gunners, manning every possible type of gun, were working with mechanical rhythm as they loaded and sent the shells to their destination. The light railways continually brought up supplies."

LINEUP OF FIRST ARMY.

It Comprises 30 Divisions, 125 Generals, and 250 Colonels.

The First American Army under command of General Pershing is made up of five army corps of six divisions each. The five corps commanders are Major Gen. Hunter Liggett, First Corps; Major Gen. Each of the thirty divisions is composed of four infantry and three artillery regiments, three machine gun battalions, one trench mortar unit, one regiment of engineers, a battalion of signal troops, and a full complement of supply trains.

There are 125 general officers in this army—five Major Generals of Corps; thirty Generals of Divisions, and ninety Brigadier Generals. It comprises no fewer than 250 Colonials.

The division commanders of the First Army Corps are Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, First Division of Regulars; Major Gen. John E. Lejune, U. S. M. C., Second Division of Regulars; Major Gen. Clarence Edwards, the Twenty-seventh or New England Division; the Thirty-second Division of Michigan and Wisconsin Guardsmen under Major Gen. William G. Haan; the Forty-first or "Sunset" Division of Guardsmen from the Far West and Pacific Coast under Major Gen. Robert Alexander, and the Forty-second or "Rainbow" Division under Major Gen. Charles T. Menoher.

The Second Army Corps under General Bullard is composed of the Fourth Division of Regulars under Major Gen. George H. Cameron, the Twenty-eighth Division of Pennsylvania Guardsmen under Major Gen. Charles H. Muir, the Thirtieth Division of Guardsmen from the Carolinas and Tennessee under Major Gen. Edward M. Lewis, the Thirty-fifth Division of Missouri and Kansas Guard troops under Major Gen. Peter E. Traub, the Seventy-seventh or "Metropolitan" Division from Camp Upton under Major Gen. George B. Duncan, and the Eighty-second Division of selective draft men from Georgia, Alabama, and Florida under Major Gen. W. P. Burnham.

In the Third Army Corps are the Third Division of Regulars under Major Gen. Joseph T. Dickman, the Fifth Division of Regulars under Major Gen. John E. McMahon, the Twenty-seventh Division of New York State Guard troops under Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan, the Thirty-third Division of Illinois Guardsmen under Major Gen. George Bell, Jr., the Seventy-eighth Division of up-State New York and Delaware selective draft troops under Major Gen. James H. Morton, the Thirty-seventh Division of Ohio Guardsmen under Major Gen. Charles E. Farnsworth, the Eighty-third National Army Division of Ohio and Pennsylvania troops under Major Gen. Edwin F. Glenn, the Eighty-ninth Division of selective draft men from seven Western States under Brig. Gen. Frank L. Winn the Ninetieth Division of Texans and Oklahomans under Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, and the Ninety-second Division of negro selective draft men under Major Gen. C. C. Ballou.

The Fifth Corps comprises the Sixth Division of Regulars under Brig. Gen. James B. Erwin, the Thirty-sixth Division of Texas and Oklahoma Guard troops under Major Gen. W. R. Smith, the Seventy-sixth Division of New England draft soldiers under Major Gen. Harry F. Hodges, the Seventy-ninth Division of selective draft men from Pennsylvania and Maryland under Major Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn, the Eighty-fifth Division of Michigan and Wisconsin selective draft men under Major Gen. Chase W. Kennedy, and the Eighty-fifth Division of draft soldiers from the Pacific and Far Western States under Brig. Gen. F. H. Foltz.

Some of these divisions are not now with the First Army. Some are fighting under General Mangin, and at least two divisions—the Twenty-seventh, which is the New York Guard unit, and the Thirtieth, the Guard unit representing Tennessee and the Carolinas—are with the British.

PRESIDENT'S EYE ON BATTLE

General March and His Aids Watch Developments with Great Eagerness.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Sixteen months of vast war effort by the United States reached its first goal today when General Pershing's forces struck their first independent blow in France against the German Army.

Of great significance to Government officials was the fact that the all-American attack meant that the months of ceaseless toil and effort have now brought forth a third great organized army, backed by its own supplies and millions more soldiers if needed, which has taken its place beside the French and British Armies and is striking for decisive victory for democratic ideals.

Up to a late hour no official report from General Pershing had come. General March, Chief of Staff, and his officers were gathered about the great war maps, however, tracing out the lines of the conflict from press accounts as they were received. President Wilson himself visited Acting Secretary Crowell during the afternoon, and there is no doubt that he was then told just what General Pershing had accomplished and what might be expected to develop from this blow.

First reports were vague. They told merely that the American Army had launched an attack around the St. Mihiel salient, the only sharp thrust toward the heart of France that remained to the German leaders to show for their offensive efforts since the war began. It seemed possible that the objective of the attack was Metz, just beyond the German border, on the Moselle River.

Later accounts made it clear, however, that for his first blow General Pershing had determined to employ the pincer tactics Marshal Foch has now used with repeated success in hurling the foe back from the Marne and out of the Picardy and Flanders salients. The chance lay ready to the American leader's hand.

Almost due south of the war-wrecked fortress of Verdun, which has defied every German effort, the town of St. Mihiel stood at the apex of a great enemy wedge driven into the French lines, and which all but cut Verdun off in the first German rush toward Paris. Along the eastern curve of this salient American troops have stood for months, holding the lines. Americans also were on the line between Verdun and St. Mihiel, but St. Mihiel itself was held by the French, for the fate of Verdun rested upon that line.

Surging forward on a twelve-mile front to the east of St. Mihiel, Pershing's men rolled over the complicated defenses of the enemy all along the line and thrust a steel-shod jaw out into the territory behind the enemy forces that held the town. From the other side another American thrust carried the lines forward to meet the bulge from the east, and a grim trap was drawn about the enemy forces that remained in the salient. It was only twenty miles across the mouth of the pocket, and the reports late tonight showed that this was being rapidly closed.

The American attack, as it now shapes up, is a major action, and there is no doubt that the strongest American forces yet employed are engaged. Possibly a quarter of a million American troops either are in action or in close reserve.

The advance of the eastern jaw rested on a wide base. Reports indicated that it had broken through at the first rush until General Pershing could fling out cavalry screens on both sides to prevent counterattacks on his flanks. The very width of his battle line, however, tended to protect him, and also to give his initial thrust the power that would carry it across the road that was the only line of retreat for the Germans in St. Mihiel.

To many officers the action started today is but the forerunner of greater blows to come. They anticipate that General Pershing will follow up without delay the clearing out of the St. Mihiel salient with actions of greater scope, probably directed toward the capture of Metz. With such an advance, it is said, a French thrust from Verdun and along the front between Verdun and Rheims would go naturally, and the great movement to force the enemy out of all northern France and much of Belgium would be well under way.

Many officers here believe Marshal Foch now has struck the blow he has had in preparation ever since he determined to withhold the bulk of the American Army from the fighting until the stage was set for decisive action.

According to the last reports noted here, American divisions known to be in the positions from which the attack was launched included the veteran 1st and 2d Regular Divisions, which were the first American units to get into action in France; the 89th National Army, composed of Kansas, Missouri, South Dakota, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico, and Arizona troops, and the 82d National Army, composed of Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee troops, with the 37th National Guard, composed of Ohio troops, further to the east on the front opposite Nancy.

General Pershing has been concentrating his army for some weeks in this general region, however, and a complete shift in the divisional alignment may have been made before the troops advanced to battle this morning.

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

French

PARIS, Sept. 11.

Night Report—The American Army attacked this morning in the region of St. Mihiel. The operation is developing under the best of conditions.

West of St. Quentin, in co-operation with the British, we advanced as far as the Holnon-Savy road, [about three miles west of St. Quentin.]

Day Report.—North of the Ailette a raid by French troops resulted in the taking of prisoners.

There was artillery activity in the Rheims and the Prosnes regions.

Two enemy raids, in the Champagne and in the Vosges, were repulsed.

British

LONDON, Sept. 12.

Night Report.—Our operations in the Havrincourt sector were continued with success this morning, in spite of the unfavorable weather.

English troops attacked and captured Trescault and the old British trench lines to the east and north of it. On their right New Zealand troops made progress east of the Gouzaucourt Wood, overcoming the obstinate resistance of a German Jaeger Division.

At Havrincourt the Sixty-second (Yorkshire) Division, which carried the village on Nov. 20, 1917, attacked for a second time over the same ground, and with like success. Other English troops attacked across the Canal Du Nord north of Havrincourt. After sharp fighting our troops captured the village, together with the section of the Hindenburg line between the village and the canal.

North of the Bapaume-Cambrai road Lancashire troops completed the capture of Moeuvres, also after sharp fighting.

About one thousand prisoners have been taken by us in these operations.

On the northern portion of the front further progress has been made by us today south of La Bassée canal and northwest of Armentières.

Day Report.—Yesterday evening our troops captured Attilly, Varmand and Vendelies, and during the night they made progress in the western outskirts of Holnon Wood.

English troops carried out successful local operations yesterday afternoon in the Havrincourt and Moeuvres sectors, overcoming considerable hostile opposition. Our troops have crossed the Canal du Nord northwest of Havrincourt and have established themselves on the west bank of the canal east and north of Moeuvres.

During the night our troops attacked and captured a strongly fortified position known as the Railway Triangle, southwest of La Bassée, taking a number of prisoners and machine guns.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 11, (via London.)

Night Report—Between the Meuse and the Moselle the French and Americans attacked at the St. Mihiel bend. The fighting continues.

Between the roads leading from Péronne and Arras to Cambrai renewed British attacks failed.

Day Report.—Partial attacks northeast of Bixschoote and enemy advances near Armentières and on La Bassée canal were repulsed.

On the battlefronts during the day infantry engagements accompanied by strong artillery fire developed in front of our positions in the Arras region. In the evening violent artillery duels occurred between the roads from Arras and Péronne toward Cambrai. British attacks delivered at the approach of darkness against the Marquion-Havrincourt canal section failed in front of our lines.

Between the Ailette and the Aisne the artillery fire increased in strength in the evening. The infantry activity here was restricted to forefield engagements. On the heights northeast of Femes (Fismes?) French partial attacks were repulsed.

There were successful reconnoitring engagements on the Lorraine front and in the Vosges.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The American forces yesterday, in co-operation with the French, launched an attack on either side of the St. Mihiel salient. As this is written details are not available, but from such reports as have reached us it would seem that a successful attack has been made over a wide front, although with limited objectives. In other words, there is nothing in the situation at present that would give any indication that an attempt has been made to break through the German lines or to reach any point of vital importance.

Apparently the Americans have attacked in the Toul sector on the southern leg of the St. Mihiel salient, and the French, moving down from the heights of the Woevre, where they retired in the early days of the battle of Verdun, advanced eastward from the western leg of the salient. This salient has ceased long ago to be of any importance either to the Germans or to the French. It was originally created by the Crown Prince's army in his first unsuccessful attempt to take Verdun, and was maintained in the hope that at some future date it could be used as a means of enveloping the Verdun area. The point of such a sharp salient is, of course, a poor jumping-off place from which to launch an attack, but if a successful attack were made southward from the Argonne country, the point of the salient might be pushed northward and thus the strap made to meet the buckle. Such a hope, however, is long since dead, so that from the German standpoint the salient is worse than useless. The only reason for persisting in maintaining it is the sentimental one of its proximity to Metz. As a matter of fact, however, the American forces are just as close to Metz at Pont-à-Mousson, if not closer, than they would be if they snuffed out the St. Mihiel salient.

The importance in this attack, however, lies not in the fact that it may be directed toward the wiping out of this position or that it may succeed in wiping it out. There are several other considerations of much greater weight. We can realize now that the American forces on this front are rapidly approaching the time when as an independent force they can shoulder some of the burdens which our allies have been carrying for so long and can fight a fight of their own. They have been in action here before, of course. At Xivray and at Seicheprey they received their baptism of fire. But the actions were local and small as such things are measured. Now they are in action on a large front and in considerable numbers, carrying on a major offensive. In view of the hard fighting of the last eight weeks it is reasonable to suppose that a considerable part of the immediate reserves have been exhausted. But here we have the proof that our men are ready, that a new and large army of freemen are at hand to throw into the fighting at the vital point.

It is too early at present to judge just how serious this attack is. The front over which it took place, however, gives reason to believe that the allied commander has meant it to be an engagement of the first magnitude. The work of the British and the French on the Picardy and Artois fronts has been so persistent and unrelenting that it has pinned down to that front the great mass of the German Army. There are very few free reserves. Practically everything that can be spared has been sent west to prevent a catastrophe about Douai and Cambrai. Not only that, but wherever men could be removed with relative safety from other parts of the line this has been done. The result is that there cannot be a considerable concentration on the American front, and reliance must to a large extent be placed upon mechanical defense—that is, on construction works. This may indeed have been the object of the allied commander—to force Germany to concentrate against the British and the French and then to strike with force, using the Americans as the shock troops. This is of course the great weakness of the German position. Their flank in Lorraine, if successfully attacked, will endanger the entire position in France and Belgium. Metz is an important, a vitally necessary base to a considerable part in their line, and with Metz out of the way the valley of the Moselle is wide open. This latest move, therefore, may mean but the snuffing out of the St. Mihiel salient, in which case it is unimportant, or it may mean the beginning of the battle which is to free France and Belgum of the invader and carry the war direct to German soil.

Reputation vs: Character

How do you define the difference between character and reputation?

Commercially, for example. There may be a better soap than Ivory.

But do you know of one?

There may be a better camera than Kodak or a finer piano than Steinway. But do you know of one?

Fine reputations depend not only on character, but upon the recognition, the common knowledge of that character.

Even when Government needs absorb the entire output of a factory, the public Good Will for the trade-marked goods should be retained for "after the war."

No manufacturer should permit the loss of both customer and custom.

Reputations may be made or maintained in times of war as in times of peace.

BY MAJOR GEN. FREDERICK B. MAURICE.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The most remarkable feature of Foch's generalship is the way in which he has succeeded in keeping his offensive alive ever since he launched his counterattack on July 15, while at the same time continually extending his front of attack.

The Germans at Verdun, and we in the first battle of the Somme and in Flanders last year, fought prolonged battles directed throughout against one and the same objective. Foch has opened a new phase of war in the west by opening up successively new fronts of attack in such a way as to give the harassed enemy no rest.

As soon as the counteroffensive on the Marne had exhausted its impetus and the enemy's resistance on the Aisne and Vesle began to harden, Hair struck in the south of the Somme. When the enemy rallied on his old defensive lines from Chaulnes to Roye, Haig began to press him to the north of the river and forced him to retreat to the Hindenburg line. Now, at the moment when the enemy has completed the shortening of his front, taken shelter behind formidable defenses and checked for the time being the allied offensive to the north of Rheims, Foch has delivered a new blow against him in the south.

It is presumably General Pershing's new army with the assistance of French divisions which has now taken its turn in the great battle. We knew that for some time past American troops have been on the Vosges front, and there has been much talk of an American offensive in that quarter, presumably as a blind to account for the southern movement of the American troops preparatory to the battle which has just begun.

St. Mihiel salient, to which our French allies have given the expressive name of the hernie, or rupture, of St. Mihiel, has been for four years one of the remarkable features of the western front. It is, or was, one of the relics of the German offensive of 1914. The salient is some twenty miles wide at its base and rather less than twenty miles in depth. It tapers down to a point just west of St. Mihiel, and at this point the Germans have held for four years a small bridgehead on the western bank of the Meuse.

Earlier in the war the enemy several times attacked in this salient, but succeeded in holding his own, despite the fact that almost all the communications within it have been within range of allied guns established on the flanks.

The backbone of the salient is the ridge of the Côtes de la Meuse, a defensive barrier which in the French prewar scheme of frontier defense linked up the Fortresses of Verdun and Toul. Once a portion of this ridge, which lies within the salient, has been secured—and reports to hand make it seem certain that it will be, for the southern attack which had gained Thiaucourt at an early hour, bids fair to cut off the Germans on the heights—we may look for further progress on the plain of Woeuvre, which lies east of it.

The news that the weather is good is of great importance, for the Woeuvre in wet weather very much resembles Flanders, and its mud would greatly hamper an attacking force.

This is the first considerable offensive which our American allies have undertaken. They have given proof of their quality as fighters in the second battle of the Marne, where their fresh vigor did much to sustain the allied offensive, and this same vigor should now carry them far against the enemy, who is dispirited by the complete failure of his plans.

Until we know more of the progress made in the first stage of the battle and of how the enemy is fighting it is idle to speculate, but a really important success on this front would give big results, for an advance of little more than ten miles from the western face of the salient would cut direct railway communication between Metz and Mezières and bring the important industrial district of Briey, from which the enemy has drawn so much of ore which has kept his munition factories going, within fire of long-range guns. At present we can only wish our allies the best of good fortune and await further news with patience.

We have lately become so accustomed to news of great events that announcements which would have excited us a couple of years ago now pass almost unnoticed. The triangle of La Bassée, which has at last passed into our hands, was the scene of bloody fighting in 1914 and 1915, when the enemy held it against all our attacks. This is another step forward into ground which never before has been in our hands. It is one more sign of weakening in the enemy.

REFLECT FURTHER GERMAN RETREAT

Writers Prepare People for More Bad News—"Parsifal Line" from Antwerp to Metz.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—Is Germany being prepared for a further retreat on the west front? Indeed, more than one military critic is writing as though the General Staff wished the people to be ready for a further retirement. Captain von Salzmann of the Vossische Zeitung says that severe fighting is to be expected in the Cambrai region and adds:

"I believe, indeed, that there even the present line is not regarded as the ultimate line of defense."

He also states that further south the German resistance will become solidified "still further east" of the Crozat Canal. As for the Aisne region, he thinks that "all the territory south of the river can be voluntarily given up without risk."

In the Düsseldorf Nachrichten, Baron von Ardenne predicts a retirement in the Wytschaete sector, and he thinks the chances of defending Lille are not very favorable. His article provides interesting evidence as to how much in the dark even the German military writers are regarding the actual situation. There is constant use of such phrases as "it is not certain" whether this part of the line has been abandoned, or "it appears" that such and such a place has been evacuated, or again that "it is most likely" that a certain movement has taken place. Meanwhile all the critics predict the immediate resumption of the heaviest fighting.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—A supreme line of defense, to be called the Parsifal line, is being constructed by the Germans from Antwerp to Metz, says Marcel Hutin in the Echo de Paris. The article also says that the Germans are putting the Antwerp forts in a defensive condition.

The Times Special Cable Dispatches from the Battlefronts

GREAT FORCE IN STROKE

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

held hard and fast by trenches at points such as St. Mihiel and Mont Sec, but in the places chosen for the entrance of our two wedges on opposite sides of the triangle the enemy has three lines. The first is held sparsely by outposts, the second by small detachments, and the third is held strongly.

We have at both points of heavy attack passed the first two lines, meeting surprisingly little serious resistance. The first batch of 100 prisoners was reported at 7 o'clock, and many smaller numbers came in up to noon.

No strong attack has been launched on the tip of the salient or against Mont Sec, but progress at other points will take care of these places.

Already there are indications that the Germans are getting out of the tip of the salient. Our troops there are moving forward cautiously, just jogging the Germans along, according to plan.

So far as the withdrawal of the enemy is concerned that was no easy matter, for every foot of the whole St. Mihiel salient was under fire of our guns.

Incidentally, while the exact number of guns we have massed may not be stated, it can be said that we have one of the largest and heaviest concentrations of artillery at work that this war or any other war has seen. Then, too, our airplane assemblage is the heaviest of the war. Chasse machines, bombers, and observers—they were all at work today.

Our chasse machines are keeping back the boche avions and strafing the German lines and our bombers are attacking the strategic points that the boche must control to withdraw.

We have a large number of heavy long-range guns at work, which, with aerial torpedoes, reach every place in the salient.

The German artillery fire has been very weak, indicating that they are drawing their guns back, and that they will probably announce another strategic victory, which they, however, had not taken advantage of in these four years before we hit the salient to announce that America had arrived in this war as a real military factor.

It is too early to tell much of the achievement in our attack, save that of the German triangle. Resting on the base of the Hindenburg line, we have chewed off considerable bites, and our appetite is not satisfied. But one can tell of how it started, of what one saw when it started.

I was away off on the Aisne front yesterday morning when word came to get east, and do it in a hurry. Quitting the Meaux correspondents' headquarters, we came across France, reaching the headquarters of this sector last night.

Showing that the American Army wants the folks back home to know what it is doing, after dinner an American General told the correspondents of the whole plan of attack, taking the United States into his confidence.

His idea was for us to understand what it all meant. The General's eyes were heavy from lack of sleep and long hours of planning, and when it was all planned it took him two hours to tell us about it. When he had told us all but the time he said:

"Gentlemen, it is now midnight; in one hour our artillery starts and at 5 our infantry starts."

When 1 o'clock came we could see the big show begin. The desultory firing before that had died down. Just at 1 o'clock thousands of guns spoke, and then others joined in. It was raining hard.

The flare of seemingly innumerable flashes lit the sky with aurora after aurora, with flitting flashes through the thickened atmosphere. The whole sky was aflame.

The whole sky was aglow with the spirit of militant America. And on and on it went, each moment like the one before; each moment sending its peace propaganda to the boche.

We snatched an hour and a half of sleep and were off for the front at 4 o'clock, the artillery still going as it had started three hours before. On a high hill just this side of the starting line I waited. Five minutes to 5, four minutes to 5, and then came our barrage.

I don't know how many guns were speaking, but the explosions came so fast that one could not distinguish the individual voice of a gun, and all the shells were screaming joyfully in one direction. I heard only two returning shells.

Then at one minute of 5 o'clock came a pause. In that pause history was in making, for just at 5 our men started.

It was too dark to see them, but when two minutes after the barrage started again, I knew it had been lifted a hundred meters, and over those hundred meters thousands of doughboys were bound north.

Then it lifted again. These were the smaller guns going, making a rolling barrage. Above their staccato voices could be heard the booming of the big rifles behind us, making a hell on earth for the Germans coming up to reinforce their line. One after another they screamed on their way.

It was growing light. The rain had stopped. Off to the eastward the clouds lifted and the sun showed its head.

Through the mist one could see the far off hills made into veritable forts. There was a roar overhead and northward swept a squadron of airplanes. On the underside of their wings I saw the American device.

They circled and started east. Patrols followed fast. Then came word that a German sausage was ascending five kilometers back, and off shot three planes in its direction. They got it.

While glorying that in this first big American effort we had air supremacy, it is but fair to state that we had not enough machines to achieve it, but owe credit to French aviators.

All the States are represented in the force making the attack. There are men from New York, California, Michigan—practically all parts of the republic.

Many of the troops, fighting today, have won their laurels in France. For others it is their first battle.

All the reports coming in show fresh progress. We are moving ahead on schedule time.

In this connection it may be said that the Germans expected the American attack but did not know the time.

European newspapers have stated that General Hindenburg was at Metz. That something was expected where it came is shown by the fact that our first troops attacking ran into the 10th German Division of shock troops.

So far the German resistance has not developed strongly. It will undoubtedly fortify the line which the German high command choose. But their counterattacks will meet Americans who have never learned how to retreat.

BRITISH IN MANY FIGHTS

By PHILIP GIBBS.

and no house stands as a shelter for men and all life is below ground in tunneled embankments and holes dug below brick heaps and twisted rails, there was some fierce fighting last night on a small scale. It was south of La Bassée, that heap of ruins which since the war began has been an ugly spearhead in our line and a fortress position which the enemy has always held in strength.

Railway lines which meet here—La Bassée was an important junction in the old days of peaceful coal-carrying for France—form a triangle below the town near the Bethune road, and this railway triangle has been the scene of close and desperate fighting during many days and nights of this war, and the rails have been torn and twisted by four years of shelling thereabout.

The plot of black earth which is inclosed by the triangle is now in our hands, after last night's action, and we established outposts across the Bethune road to a place called Canteleaux. We are one step closer to the fortress position of La Bassée and the garrison there will have to draw in its horns a little.

It was not an attack in any set piece style. There was no preliminary bombardment, but only heavy gunning of German battery positions and other points to keep them quiet with German heads below ground while some of our troops pushed out suddenly, surrounding the enemy's outposts and machine guns.

There was some savage fighting in the triangle, with here and there German and English soldiers at close grips with bayonets or bombs, but for the most part the Germans were trapped quickly in their holes below the embankment and told to get out or be killed. Forty-one of them got out and went meekly away with our escort, and are now in camp behind our lines eating English rations and glad of them. That small action has nothing to do with recent fighting and its aftermath but is an isolated episode unrelated to the German retreat.

Along the line of that retreat in the old Cambrai salient and east of Péronne there has been sharp fighting of the outpost kind, though serious in its way, especially near Epehy, by the canal, at Moeuvres and in Havrincourt Wood, and on the Australian front southwards. There was strong German resistance by machine gun and rifle fire along the Canal de la Sensée by Moeuvres, but in spite of this our outposts succeeded in crossing the canal and establishing posts on the other side.

During the night and morning the German artillery was fiercely active and fired a large number of gas shells into Boursies and other places along our lines. There was also some heavy shelling on the Australian front, and the enemy made a determined counterattack near Hesbecourt and forced in some of our advanced posts.

To the north of that the Germans are holding on to Epehy with renewed strength and with the obvious determination to hold us back as long as possible in order to gain time for the further strengthening and defense of their Hindenburg line beyond.

Meanwhile, by a local attack this morning we captured the village of Mescault and Havrincourt Wood with 200 prisoners, so that in this part of the line we are almost back again to the positions we held before our adventures in the Cambrai salient last year.

Havrincourt Wood for me, and for many others, will always be a place haunted by many memories. I went through it first in November of last year, when our Scottish troops passed through it on their way to the château beyond and the ground that slopes to the valley beyond Fontaine Notre Dame and rises again to the heights of Bourlon Wood. Half way through Havrincourt Wood, in a hollow and open glade, there is an old statue of St. Hubert, patron saint of hunters, to whom Louis XI. of France doffed his cap before riding on with his hounds.

Stranger beasts than wild boar were in Havrincourt Wood that day I walked through it first, for our tanks had made their lair there, and at night when I came back the light of shellfire flashing around bare trees with their tangled branches gleamed upon the steel flanks of those monsters, as I described at the time, and gave them an uncanny look amidst the undergrowth.

The château beyond, a fine old place of brick, darkened by many Winters of hard weather, was already in ruins, though some of its thick walls were standing and part even of its gables and turrets. Below one wall lay a row of German dead, for the Highlanders had hard fighting there on their way up the slope, and other dead lay below the bushes in the garden, and everywhere there was the litter of human conflict.

But our machine gunners were fixing up good fields of fire for defense on the reverse side of the château grounds, and English soldiers with their steel hats aslant were collecting souvenirs and watching the progress of the battle further on by Cantaign and Moeuvres and Fontaine Notre Dame, to which our tanks went cruising like a battle fleet.

Havrincourt Wood and Havrincourt Château have had much history since then, and once again the field gray men of the German Army have encamped under cover of their trees, and now that our troops have taken them again there will be a new litter of human conflict piled on the old.

FRENCH RESTORING ROADS

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Sept. 11.—Once again there is a pause in the battle on the Somme-Aisne front. It is more apparent than real, for from Flanders to Rheims actions on a minor scale—preparatory for greater events—are continuous.

Everywhere on these sectors the Allies are "nibbling" forward, seeking or developing weak points in the German line of resistance. Meanwhile the work of repairing roads and bringing up guns and material is proceeding with tremendous energy throughout the area behind the allied front. What that task means I will try to illustrate by a description of a trip that I made through a region twice devastated by fire and high explosive.

Noyon a Mere Shell.

My itinerary was Noyon, Guiscard, Ham, Nesle, Roye and Lassigny and back past the bloodstained hill of Plement through the Thiescourt massif to Compiègne. Noyon, as related in a previous dispatch, is a mere shell without shelter for man or beast. Such walls as remain standing bear innumerable boche placards pointing out collection depots for everything that can have the least value. Old iron, rags, vessels of brass, cartridge or shell cases, nothing is forgotten, and here and there—where the enemy has not had time to remove it—is the damning notice of "Plunder Depot," to insure that the place has been stripped to the bare walls.

Along the road from Noyon to Guiscard French armored cars and cavalry drove the boche too swiftly for them to blow up either the highway or the light railroad that runs beside it. Even the telegraph poles are cut down on either side of it, so that nothing breaks the wide vista of the plateau whose trees were all massacred in the boche retreat of last year. At Guiscard also the enemy was too hurried for devastation, but in the central square a twisted medley of iron that once was German camions, and the stark and horrible bodies of men and horses, bear witness to the terrible work of the allied bomb planes.

Further on the crest of the plateau above Ham a big German store depot formed rich booty for the French. An attempt had been made to set fire to it, but the time pressed too greatly and only one corner was destroyed. As I examined what appeared to be small mines to be floated down the rivers against the allied bridges a heavy shell burst near the roadside some 200 yards behind me. In the whole trip it was the sole instance of the enemy's spending explosive on the zone behind the front he knows is lost to him.

Ham was still afire. But one object had been spared in the whole town—a life-size bronze statue of Roy, one of Napoleon's Generals, in the square, with an inscription on the pedestal which this war more than ever has justified, "The appeal to honor and duty never goes unheard in France."

On the eastern outskirts is the cemetery, which is untouched. The French graves, among which are those of two Americans, Ronald Hoskier and Edmond Genet, Lafayette pilots who were killed in the Spring of last year, have not been despoiled of wreaths, as often has happened to decorate new German graves beside them.

Near the entrance on the road to Nesle a big wooden barrack built last year by the American Red Cross was still intact, as if to disprove the possible German claim that the burning of Ham was justifiable as depriving French soldiers from shelter.

Two miles from Nesle the highway was barred by a flood and I entered the town by a detour. A number of new buildings erected by the Red Cross bore little trace of injury. Nesle and, later, Roye appeared not to have suffered otherwise than from shellfire. The French advance had been too rapid. But in both towns I was informed that mines and deadly "booby" traps had been discovered. The road from Nesle to Roye was unimpaired. Undemolished shell dumps, scattered material in great quantities, and the bodies of men and horses bore witness to the rapidity of the German retreat.

Desolation Beyond Roye.

But it was from Roye onward that all the hideous destructiveness of war became visible. Our car bumped over a never-ending series of shell holes which prisoners, Annamites, and Territorials were busily filling. Already the German light railroad has been put in working order, though at one point the little train jolted ominously over the road before us.

The country from Crapeaumesnil to beyond Plemont was a scene of incredible desolation, scarred with the wire and trenches of four years of continuous fighting. Here a fresh shell had disinterred the whitened bones of a skeleton which had been buried since 1914; there was an up-torn dugout dotted with dead Germans. Some old settlements and perhaps twoscore houses were still standing. Lassigny had been literally smashed out of existence. Only grass-grown stone heaps told where the town had been.

The whole region is torn and riven as if beaten with a gigantic hammer. It lies untillable and uninhabitable, blasted by fire from Heaven like Sodom and Gomorrah.

WILSON TO HEROES' FATHER

Two of Gerald's Sons Killed in Action, a Third Seriously Wounded.

Special to The New York Times.

BELOIT, Wis., Sept. 12.—George W. Gerald of this city, two of whose sons have been killed in France and a third seriously wounded, has received the following letter from President Wilson:

"The White House.
"Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.

"My dear Mr. Gerald: May I not express to you my profound sympathy for the loss of your sons, Lieutenant Gerald and Sergeant Gerald, and for the wounding of your other son, Corporal Gerald, and express, not my sympathy merely, but by admiration for the services which your sons have given and the great sacrifices they have made for the safety of their country and the freedom of the world? I sincerely hope that in years to come, and even now, in the midst of the first anguish of these losses, you may be cheered by the consciousness that your sons accepted a destiny touched with unusual distinction and which will be forever memorable throughout the world.

"WOODROW WILSON."

British Premier Taken Ill After Speeches in Manchester.

MANCHESTER, England, Sept. 12.—It was officially announced late tonight after his speeches here that Premier Lloyd George was suffering from a chill.

He has a high temperature and may be prevented from fulfilling all his engagements in his present tour of Lancashire, the statement adds.

Czarina and Daughters Are Dead.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 13.—The Daily Telegraph says that although the report of the death of the former Empress of Russia and her daughters is not confirmed officially and details are lacking, there is no doubt that it is true.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Lieut. Cecil Healy, a well known Australian swimmer, was killed by a bullet on the Somme battlefield on Sept. 1, according to Le Journal. The Lieutenant led a party of 500 swimmers across the Somme, enveloped the enemy positions and captured Mont St. Quentin, the key to Péronne.

McCORMICK VICTORY GROWS

Lead Over Mayor Thompson of Chicago Reaches 63,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—The plurality of Medill McCormick, successful candidate in Wednesday's Senatorial primary, kept soaring today as belated returns came in. His indicated lead over Mayor William Hale Thompson is now about 63,000.

Returns representing each of the 101 counties outside of Cook, with thirty-eight counties complete, and with 671 precincts missing out of a total of 2,973, give these results: McCormick, 102,467; Thompson, 41,002; Foss, 35,646. This ratio, carried out, would give a McCormick plurality over Thompson down State of more than 80,000. Complete unofficial returns from Cook County give Thompson a plurality over McCormick of 15,535.

Foss cut into Cook County just strong enough to land it for Thompson. The combined McCormick and Foss vote in the county is 2,818 more than the Thompson poll.

PARIS EXPECTED NEW FOCH STROKE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Paris, now that the enemy has been driven to take refuge in what is recognized as the strongest and most colossal fortress of the world, is taking advantage of the moment to consider dispassionately some of the outstanding factors of the situation. Taken as a whole, the present position of the Allies is regarded here as incontestably good.

The only irritating feature is the persistent rain which is hampering the pursuit of such of the enemy as still are flying for refuge in the Hindenburg line, and rendering ten times more difficult the work of our troops in their heavy task of organizing their new front of attack. The bad weather must be having a serious effect on the French black troops, who have been fighting with incomparable bravery, especially with Mangin's ironside divisions on the La Fère, Saint Gobain front. Worst of all, the rain is hindering the splendid work of our aviators, owing to the extremely low conditions of visibility set up thereby.

All France is praying for another five or six weeks of clear, dry days before Winter comes on. At the present juncture the weather is a vital factor in the situation. The Germans have everything to gain by the continuance of existing bad weather, whereas Foch might be able within the next few weeks to jockey the enemy into a very much tighter place than even that into which he already has driven them.

Experts here, indeed, consider that Foch has only begun the execution of his plan which will result in putting out of business the German Army as a military machine. By his victories since July 18 Foch has brought back the western front to the geographical situation in which it stood in the earlier part of last year, when the British and French commanders began to have a pretty clear idea of the immense task before them, and of what was and was not possible. The difference in the situation is now enormous, and is regarded here on the balance as immensely in favor of the Allies, elimination of Russia notwithstanding. Russia, which then was a positive factor in our favor, is now regarded here as merely a negative one from our point of view, and certainly so far has brought no appreciable increase of strength to the enemy.

The Germans, although they have nominally conquered a large part of Russia, still are compelled to maintain there an army approaching 750,000 men, and have ever before them the spectre of the resurrection of pro-ally Russia which may at any moment rise up to prove more menacing in view of the present disorganized state of the country than the sedition-poisoned army of the Czar.

On the other hand, the moral strength and resistance of Germany both at the front and at home undoubtedly have been enormously depressed by the two months of continuous allied victories, while her armies have been substantially weakened.

When the enemy began his series of great drives on March 21 the Germans had eighty-seven divisions in reserve, or about 200,000 men, in addition to something like 2,000,000 holding the line in France and Belgium. The enemy now has about 200 divisions, all told, on the western front, or rather less than 2,000,000 bayonets, in view of the manner in which the effective strength of the average German division has been reduced by the enemy high command.

The enemy's losses since March 21 are estimated here at somewhere about 1,250,000 killed, wounded, prisoners, and missing. Assuming that between 50 and 60 per cent. of these casualties, or 700,000, since have been able to return to the fighting line, fifty-five of eighty-seven reserve divisions possessed by the Germans on March 21 have been wiped out, leaving them with only thirty-two now available. The heaviest German losses during the recent fighting, moreover, occurred among the enemy's best troops, which provides another very satisfactory feature for the Allies.

Paris is convinced that the hour is fast approaching, now that the Germans have been driven to take refuge behind the Hindenburg line, when the enemy will make a desperate new peace offensive. The enemy's object will be to avoid the fatal consequences to Prussian militarism of anything in the way of a Wilson-Lloyd George-Clemenceau peace, which would create a new order in the world's affairs. Paris is expecting the immediate resumption of the subtle machinations of all the pro-German neutrals, which will probably very shortly begin pointing out through their journals the uncertainties of the war, the doubtfulness of the immediate future, the possibility of the war lasting another two or three years, and the advisability of the adversaries coming to terms before both sides are worn down to exhaustion.

Opinion here, however, is fully prepared for such efforts to unsettle the will of the people to fight until a decisive and final victory is assured, and is discounting in advance the attempt that probably shortly again will be made to bring about a premature peace.

NEW YORKER DOWNS THREE GERMAN PLANES

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 11, (Associated Press.)—Three German airplanes are believed to have been shot down yesterday by Lieutenant Jacques Swaab of New York City. On his return from a flight over the lines he engaged and shot down a Fokker machine. Continuing his return flight he was attacked by a group of German planes, but shot one down in flames and forced another down out of control.

The victories have been reported and official confirmation of them is now being sought.

Lieutenant Jacques Swaab is the son of M. Meyer Swaab, Secretary of the Borge Incinerator Corporation, 949 Broadway. He is 24 years old and was graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1916. He entered the air service in June, 1917, and was trained at Dayton and Columbus, Ohio. He sailed for overseas as a member of the 107th Aero Squadron and completed his training in France and Italy. Last week his father received a letter from him saying that he had at last attained the ambition that made him enter the service—actual flying combat at the front. Mr. Swaab was delighted at the showing of his son.

Montclair Aviator Is Missing.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Sept. 12.—Word was received here today that Lieutenant John J. Redfield of the British aviation service has been missing since Aug. 21. He was seen to fall behind the German lines. Redfield is a son of Major H. J. Redfield of the Montclair Battalion.

the prosecution, the jury was patient and attentive, and the Judge's charge was masterly and scrupulously fair."

Mrs. Stokes Expects Many Converts.

"To find 'Gene' Debs guilty of disloyalty to his country will mean the conversion to our cause of many of the millions in this country who either know or have heard him," Rose Pastor Stokes declared at the close of the trial. "The verdict will greatly help the movement and makes us tremendously hopeful and joyous."

Judge Westenhaver in his charge declared that the Socialist Party was not on trial, and that defendant was not being tried because he was a member of the Socialist Party. He also made it clear that Debs was not on trial and was not to be tried for any other offense except his Canton speech. He ruled that the Espionage act did not conflict with the Constitution of the United States.

"The act was passed to protect the public peace and the public safety in time of war. The constitutional guarantee of free speech and a free press does not forbid the enactment of a law to protect the public peace and safety," he declared. "In the last analysis, the question for us today is whether the evidence proves beyond reasonable doubt that defendant intended to do the things forbidden by the law. Disapproval of the war or advocacy of peace is not a crime unless the words uttered shall be wilfully intended by the person uttering them to have the effect and consequences forbidden by law."

HOPE STILL IN U-BOATS.

Von Scheer Says They Will Yet Bring England to Her Knees.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—Admiral von Scheer, Chief of the German Admiralty Staff, is quoted by Dr. Wildgrube, Conservative member of the Reichstag, according to a Dresden dispatch printed in the Cologne Gazette, as having said in the course of a speech:

"You may say to the country with a good conscience that I do not doubt for a moment we shall bring England to her knees by submarine warfare. Only I will not bind myself to a definite date."

Sumptuous Oriental Rugs
At Less than Present Wholesale Cost

DISPOSAL of the private collections of five eminent Oriental Rug connoisseurs will begin at our Exhibition and Sales Rooms,

15-17 East 40th St.,
On Monday, September 16th, at 10 A. M.

Involved in this Exhibit are many weaves that hereafter will be confined to private collections, museums, etc., due to the changes wrought by the war on the Oriental Rug industry. Nearly all of the Rugs were secured prior to the World-War, and embrace designs from the most famous looms, including Persian, Turkish, Kurdistan, India, and a variety of superb Chinese Rugs. Many will be offered at

One-Third to One-Fourth of Their Actual Valuation Based on Present Prices

Those who are adding Rugs to their collections, as well as all home furnishers, are urged to inspect this noteworthy collection, and compare our prices with the best values obtainable elsewhere.

Observation Involves No Obligation to Purchase.

Quite a few are Antiques and will eventually command many times their present prices. All of these Rugs have unusual merit, and are perfectly sanitary and free from dust. The values are remarkable and simply cannot be duplicated, as your examination and comparison will reveal. Some large size Rugs are as low as $25—that cost a great deal more before the rug embargo sent Orientals soaring.

A Rare Investment Opportunity

The Oriental Rug Industry is rapidly being commercialized. Machines are displacing the hand looms and the hereditary skill of the native weavers. As a result the lovely hand-made Oriental Rugs are becoming exceedingly scarce, with a corresponding enhancement of value. Therefore, this occasion presents an investment opportunity that may never again be duplicated. Convenient terms may be arranged.

Your Co-operation Is Invited

You may acquire ownership of one or more of these valuable Rugs by co-operating with us in a manner that calls for no selling activity nor expressed identification with this Company. If interested please use coupon below. If you live outside of New York City, your expenses will be defrayed by the Company. KAISER EXHORTS LABOR TO HOLD ON Calls on Krupp Workers to Pledge All Nation's Toilers to Fight to Last.

SAYS FOES JEER AT PEACE

HE GRIEVES FOR HIS PEOPLE

Tells of "Death-Defying Navy's" Victory—Says U-Boats Gnaw at Allies' Vitals.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—Speaking at the Krupp munition works at Essen, Emperor William declared that every one in the remotest corner of the Fatherland knew that he had "left no stone unturned to shorten the war as far as possible for your people and for the entire civilized European world."

The Emperor said it took two to make peace—that one could not do it unless he could overcome the other. Germany was confronted with her enemies' will to destroy her, and she must place against this her determination to preserve her existence.

After mentioning his offers of peace the Emperor said that the German leaders had made it plain to every one who wished to understand "that we are at all times ready to offer the hand to peace."

In beginning his address the Emperor said:

"My dear friends at the Krupp Works: I have long felt a desire to pay you a visit during this war but, as you know, numerous political and military duties have summoned me to the various battlefields and regions of war-wrecked Europe. Now at last, to my delight, I have succeeded in coming here to the works which I have been able to observe in their development since my earliest childhood, and the inspection of which has always filled me with the greatest admiration for German science and inventive energy.

Supreme War Lord Astounded.

"What I want to do today is to express my imperial thanks to the Directors of the Krupps, the foremen, the workmen, and the workwomen for the absolutely astounding manner in which the Krupp Works have been placed at the disposal of the German Army and its supreme war lord. Very great work has been accomplished by all from the Directors down to the last workman and workwoman, and this under increasing food difficulties, clothing difficulties, and losses, sorrows and cares which have spared no home, neither princely house nor modest workman's dwelling.

"Industrial mobilization, without distinction of age or sex, has constituted a demand such as never before was made on the German people, and yet it was responded to willingly and joyfully. In that connection I should like, above all, to express my warm thanks as the country's father to the women as well as the girls and the men for their self-sacrificing performance of their duty, despite their harassing cares.

"No one among our people should imagine I am not conversant with this. In my journeyings through the land I have spoken with many a widow, many a peasant, many a member of the Landwehr and the Landsturm, whose hearts were heavy with cares, but who glowed with the thought of duty first. I have been touched by your cares to the depths of my heart. What paternal suggestion could do to diminish the burden as far as possible has been done. Much could have been done otherwise, and it is no wonder there is dissatisfaction here and there.

"But to whom, after all, do we owe this? Who spoke at the very beginning of the war of starving out the German women and children? Who was it who introduced terrible hatred into this war? It was the enemy.

"Every one of you in the remotest corner of the Fatherland knows that I left no stone unturned to shorten the war as far as possible for you and your people and for the entire civilized European world. In December, 1916, I presented the enemy public with a clear and unambiguous offer of peace in the name of the German Empire and my allies. Jeers, mockery, and contempt were the answer.

"He up above knows my sense of responsibility. Repeatedly during the past months the responsible leaders of the Imperial Government have unambiguously given to understand, to every one who wished to understand, that we are at all times ready to offer the hand to peace."

The Emperor declared the answer of Germany's enemy was the outspoken will to the destruction, the disintegration, the crushing of Germany.

"To make peace," he added, "two are needed. If either is unwilling the other cannot, presuming that he does not overthrow the other. Thus we are confronted with the enemy's absolute will to destruction. And against this absolute will to destruction we must place our absolute will to preserve our existence.

"Our brave army out there has shown you this will and deed. Whether in assault, or withdrawal, or trench fighting, the only thing that matters is that the enemy should lose as much as possible. That has occurred and continues to occur.

"Our death-defying navy also has proved that. It beat the enemy at the Skagerrack despite his great superiority. Our U-boats, like a consuming worm, gnaw at the enemy's vitals more than our enemies will admit.

"Even though, in the opinion of many among you, it is lasting too long, every German man and every German woman must, as witnesses of these incomparable heroic deeds of our army and our navy, be aware that we are fighting and struggling for existence and that we must make the utmost effort to defend ourselves victoriously, not only through the work but as regards the thoughts of our people.

"Many among you have often asked themselves during this long war: 'How did such a thing happen? Why did we have to undergo such a thing after forty years of peace?' I think it is a question well worthy of an answer and which must be answered for the future—for our children and our grandchildren. I have thought long on the matter and have come to the following answer:

"In this world good clashes with evil. That is how things have been ordered from on high—the yes and the no; the no of the doubting mind against the yes of the creative mind; the no of the pessimist against the yes of the optimist; the no of the unbeliever against the yes of the champion of faith; the yes of Heaven against the no of Hell.

War a Product of a Great Negation.

"You will acknowledge that I am right in describing this war as the product of a great negation. And do you ask what negation it is? It is the negation of the German people's right to existence. It is the negation of all our kultur, a negation of our achievements, of all our work.

"The German people was industrious, meditative, assiduous, imaginative in all domains. It worked with body and soul. But there were people who did not wish to work but to rest on their laurels. Those were our enemies. We got close to them through our profitable work and the development of our industry, science and art; through our popular education and social legislation. Thereby our people throve, and then came envy.

"Envy induced our enemies to fight, and war came upon us. And now when our opponents see that their hopes have been deceptive and how our mighty generals, after whom your new workshops are rightly named, have dealt them blow upon blow, hatred springs up. We only know the honest wrath which deals the enemy the blow, but when he lies prostrate and bleeding we extend to him our hand and see to his recovery.

"Hatred manifests itself only among peoples who feel themselves beaten. If, therefore, such terrible hatred exists among our enemies, it owes its origin to the fact that their calculations have been wrong. Every one who knows the character of the Anglo-Saxons knows what it means to fight them—how tenacious they are. We do not know when the struggle will end, but one thing we do know, namely, that we must fight the battle through.

"And now, my friends, let me draw your attention to something more. You have read what recently happened in Moscow—the mighty conspiracy against the present government. The parliamentary-governed, democratic British nation has endeavored to overthrow the ultra-democratic government which the Russian people had begun to construct, because this government, considering the interests of its fatherland, wishes to maintain its people in the peace for which it clamors.

"But the Anglo-Saxon does not yet desire peace. That is how things are. It is proof of his feeling of inferiority that the Anglo-Saxon has recourse to such criminal means.

"Everything now depends on our final exertions, everything is at stake, and because our enemies know it, because they have the greatest respect for the the German army, because they see they cannot overcome our army and navy, they are trying to overcome us by means of internal disintegration and to weaken us by false rumors.

"These do not emanate from the German people. They are artificial productions. But whoever harkens to such rumors, whoever passes on unsubstantiated news in the railway workshop or elsewhere, sins against the Fatherland, he is a traitor and is liable to severe punishment no matter whether he be a Count or a workman.

"I know very well every one of you will acknowledge that I am right in this matter. Believe me it is not easy for me to bear every day the anxiety and the responsibility for a nation of 70,000,000, and for more than four years be a spectator to all the difficulties and increasing distress of the people."

The Emperor then referred to the German Empress "who by God's assistance again is on the road to recovery." He recalled the passages in the Bible: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and He shall sustain thee," and "But seek ye first his kingdom and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." The Emperor then added:

"How can we please God and soften his heart? By doing our duty! In making our fatherland free! Consequently, it is our duty to hold out with all our strength in the fight against our enemies.

"Each one of us has received his appointed task from on High. You at your hammer, you at your lathe, and I on my throne. We must all, however, build on God's assistance. Doubt is the greatest ingratitude toward the Lord, and now I ask you all simply and honestly: Have we, then, really ground for doubt?

"Just look at the four years of war! What immense achievements we have behind us! Half the world stood against us and and our royal allies, and now we have peace with Russia and peace with Rumania. Serbia, and Montenegro is finished.

Relies on God in the West.

"Only in the west do we still fight, and is it to be thought that the good God will abandon us there at the last moment?

"We should be ashamed of the faintheartedness which comes when one gives credence to rumors. From the facts which you yourselves have experienced forge for yourselves a firm belief in the future of your fatherland.

"We often at home and at the front, in church and in the open air, have sung: 'Ein feste Burg is unser Gott.' So it is resounded in the blue vault of heaven and in the thunderclouds. The nation from which such a hymn originated must be invincible.

"My request; my demand of you and through you to all the workers who have proved themselves so admirable and capable, and through you again to the entire German people, is this: For me and for my relations to my people my words of Aug. 4, 1914, hold good. I know no party. I know only Germans.

"It is now no time for factions. We must all now combine into a block, and, here, the most appropriate word is to be as hard as steel, and a block of the German people welded into steel shall show its strength to the enemy.

"Whoever, therefore, is determined to obey this summons; whoever has his heart in the right place, and whoever intends to keep faith, let him stand up.

"Now promise me on behalf of the entire German labor, 'We intend to fight and to hold out to the last, so help us, God.' Whoever so intends let him answer 'Yes.'"

The assembly loudly chorused "Yes," and the Emperor continued:

"I thank you. With this 'Yes' I go now to the Field Marshal. Now it is for every one of us to fulfill his vow of duty and to exert his body and mind to the utmost for the Fatherland. Every doubt must be banished from mind and heart.

"Our watchword now is, The German swords are raised, hearts are strong, and muscles are taut. On to battle against everything that stands against us, no matter how long it lasts, so help us God. Amen. And now, farewell."

Supply in City's Draft Reservoir More Than Doubled By New Enrollments, Which Bring Total Registration to 1,396.711 Men

In the registration yesterday of men between the ages of 18 and 45 years 763,088 enrolled in the city as liable for service in the National Army according to last night's returns. These men made up the fourth group to register since the declaration of war against Germany. The first registration was on June 5, 1917, of men between the ages of 21 and 31 years, 589,317 of whom were enrolled in the city. On June 5, 1918, those men who had become 21 years old since the registration in 1917 registered, of whom there were 36,185 in the five boroughs. An additional group of men reaching 21 years of age registered on Aug. 24 last and added 8,121 names to those listed in the city.

The following table gives the number of men registered yesterday by boroughs in comparison with the totals of those registered on the three former occasions:

763,088 REGISTER HERE FOR NEW ARMY

bles in the Bronx registered during the first two hours. A reserve force of more than 500 interpreters and clerks were mobilized for emergency service in the Bronx at 2,720 Third Avenue. Whenever the rush at a polling place appeared to be getting beyond bounds the required number of extra registrars and interpreters were sent there in automobiles.

Busy at the Armory.

One of the busiest registering places in Manhattan was the armory of the 22d Regiment of Engineers at 168th Street and Broadway in the Washington Heights district. The drill floor was utilized by about 100 registrars. By 10 o'clock 2,000 men had entered the armory and completed their registration, which was one of the best records in the city.

One of the first of the nineteen-year-olds to appear at the armory answered the questions with ease until he came to the citizenship of his father.

"Are you a citizen of the United States?" he was asked.

"I don't know; I guess I belong in no man's land," he replied.

"How's that?"

"Well, you see," he answered, "my father has only taken out first papers, and so I won't be a citizen until I am 21, although I was born here."

The boy was made happy when informed that having been born here made him a citizen whether his father was naturalized or not.

"How old are you?" he was asked.

He said that he was born in South Carolina in the year of the big earthquake. That puts him in the draft and he was registered.

Board 131 registered the men of its district in the public school at Fifty-seventh Street, between Second and Third Avenues. This was another "bee hive" during the early hours. One of the first to register in this district was Congressman John F. Carew of 313 East Fifty-seventh Street.

City College was the registration place for Board 141, and about 10 o'clock in the morning 300 Scandinavians appeared for registration.

"Who are you?" the puzzled chief registrar asked.

"We are the officers and sailors who man the Norwegian and other neutral ships lying out there in the river," an officer, who acted as spokesman, replied.

"Well, I am afraid that we cannot register you. However, I will call up the Draft Director," the chief registrar said.

"Register the whole bunch," was the reply that came from Director Conboy's office, and all the Scandinavian interpreters in the vicinity were mobilized.

During the day a deaf and dumb man appeared at the office of Mr. Conboy. He lives in Trenton. He was turned over to Miss Bridget Rooney of the New York Deaf and Dumb Institute, who registered him.

A Mohammedan muezzin and a Syrian priest assisted the draft officials of local Board 89 in P. S. 29, at Albany and Washington Streets, by going among their respective religious followers and advising them as to the draft. Up to noon 800 were registered at that board.

In the Boroughs of Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond, the registration was half completed by noon. In Brooklyn the lines started to form as early as 4 A. M. Two boards in the East New York and Brownsville sections opened their doors at 5 o'clock and began to make enrollments. There were long lines of waiting men at every registration place at 7 o'clock.

Justice Cropsey of the Supreme Court and County Clerk William E. Kelly were among the first to register in Brooklyn. They are married and Mr. Kelly has two children, but both officials said they would not claim exemption. Justice Cropsey stated he would do everything he could to arrange his affairs so that he may go as a private.

Near Holiday in City.

Registration Day gave New York City much the appearance of a holiday. Public schools were closed and many business houses were open only part of the day. The Stock Exchange was closed all day and Wall Street lacked much of its usual bustle. The registration extended even to the hospitals, prisons, and asylums of the city.

In the financial district business was at a standstill all day. The Stock Exchange and the Cotton Exchange were closed and the usually busy streets in the neighborhood were quiet. Many of the teachers in the public schools, which were closed all day, acted as clerks at the local boards. The Department of Education Building at Fifty-eighth Street and Park Avenue was closed at noon so that the employes could go before their draft boards. Of the 540 school buildings in the city, 348 were used as registration places.

Many housewives who went out early yesterday to do their shopping, found stores not yet open. Macy's, in which business usually begins at 9 o'clock, was closed until noon so that 800 employes could register. Other business houses enabled their employes to comply with the draft law by allowing them to leave work early. No special arrangement was made at Wanamaker's, according to Advertising Manager Walker, because the usual working hours, from 10 A. M. until 4:30 P. M. permitted ample time for the employes to register.

Swift & Co. arranged for half of its men to come to work late and for the other half to leave early. Many other firms made similar arrangements. Park & Tilford permitted all its employes of draft age to quit work at 2 P. M., and the National Biscuit Company instructed its 4,000 workers of draft age not to start work until they had registered.

Holiday Touch at Hotels.

Draft day gave the New York hotels a holiday touch. The lobbies were filled with guests who remained for the day after filling out their registration cards. The draft will take most of the men now employed in hotels of the city, and women will be employed as doorkeepers, night watchers, clerks, and in almost every other department hitherto filled by men.

At the various local boards throughout the city circulars were distributed urging the registrants to "Learn to Kill Huns" free at the United States Rifle Range, Caldwell, N. J. It was stated that there would be 500 targets, each one the size of the Crown Prince's head.

A French blue devil, wounded three times in the fighting in France and honorably discharged, and now employed by ex-Governor Murphy at his Summer home at Mendham, N. J., was among those who registered for the draft in Newark. He is Jean Joseph G. Isori, 36 years old, of 175 Ferry Street.

Half the police registered yesterday, according to Commissioner Enright, who said he did not have accurate figures. The total membership of the Police Department is 10,700. If all of those registering today should be called into the national service, the Commissioner said that he would not know what to do unless he called upon the police reserve force to replace 5,000 patrolmen. Half of the reserve force, which numbers 10,000, registered yesterday.

Commissioner Enright seemed confident that as a result of his consultation with the Washington authorities two weeks ago about the exemption of patrolmen, some provision would be made whereby members of the Police Department would be placed in a deferred class.

FEW SLACKERS, SAYS CONBOY.

Martin Conboy, Director of the draft in New York City, issued the following statement last night:

"With the registration of this day we shall have on our classification lists in this city the names of over 1,400,000 men of military ages. It seems appropriate at this time, when the returns from New York City show such an enormous registration, to say a word regarding the recent so-called 'slacker raids.'

"The figures that have been given have created the impression among those who have not examined them closely that a great many men of draft age in New York City succeeded in evading for a long time their military obligations. The facts are decidedly otherwise. There is not a community in the country that at the time of the raid was so free from slackers and deserters as New York City. The actual result of the raid was as follows:

"In Manhattan 60 non-willful deserters were sent to Camp Upton. Of them, 40 were from New York City and 28 from other places. In addition 57 men were held pending word from draft officials outside of this State, in distant places, as to their disposition. Not one willful deserter was found to go to Fort Jay.

"In Brooklyn 3 men were sent to Fort Jay as willful deserters, and 72 to Camp Upton as non-willful delinquents. This makes a total of 200, of whom at least 85 were not New York City men. There were some prosecutions for failure to register, but I do not believe the number will exceed 100.

"When it is remembered that there were 640,000 names on our classification lists before this day's registration, the result of the raids from the slacker standpoint were really negligible.

"The fact is that the city was very carefully combed for slackers before this raid was made. The greatest number of those taken in the ordinary course of the administration of the law were from other places, probably due to the expectation that in our great city a detection of slackers was impossible.

"For a time we sent to camp in the regular course of business from 200 to 250 men a day. In one day 600 men were delivered at Fort Jay, Governors Island. New York City ceased to be a refuge for slackers, and the raid proved that they had either cleared out or had been cleared out. These are the facts about the 15,000 alleged delinquents mentioned in some of the newspaper reports.

"I do not desire to be understood as criticising the raids. It removed any impression any one may have had about where New York City stood in the administration of the draft law. It was, in a sense, good draft propaganda as well. It was notice at the psychological moment that the man who failed to register today was courting trouble.

"It undoubtedly inconvenienced a great number of people, some of them perhaps unnecessarily, but I believe that the recollection of what the boys on the other side must endure will make even the greatest inconvenience that anyone suffered seem negligible in the comparison."

ENROLL EVERYWHERE WITHOUT A HITCH

Reports to Crowder Indicate Big Success of Registration—Totals Not Yet Available.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Reports received at the Provost Marshal General's office tonight indicated that there had been a splendid response throughout the nation in today's registration for draft purposes of males between the ages of 18 and 21 years and between 32 and 46 years. These reports said the registration had gone off satisfactorily everywhere. No incidents out of the ordinary were reported.

No figures are yet available as to the result of the registration. General Crowder did not expect to receive figures tonight. The registration places were open until 9 o'clock, and the closing hour was too late for results by registration places to be tabulated and wired to Washington.

One gratifying feature was the statement in a message from New York that in several of the larger districts in that city the total number registered was higher than the preliminary estimate. This was true of some of the other large cities. This is not, however, to be taken to mean that the estimate for the entire country will be exceeded. This estimate is approximately 13,000,000.

General Crowder took off several hours from his office to visit several of the registration places in Washington. He made these visits informally and without indicating his identity to the registrants.

General Crowder announced that deferred classification, under the new draft ages, on industrial, occupational, or employment grounds, was not to be confined to necessary employes in industries named in the "Preference List" announced Monday by the War Industries Board. He sought to make it especially clear that the "work or fight" order had not been extended to cover all industries, businesses, and professions not included in Chairman Baruch's list of industries which are to have preference in securing fuel, transportation, materials, labor, and capital.

The two groups—industries not entitled to priority from the War Industries Board and classes of employment held "nonproductive" under the "work or fight" order—General Crowder said, "not only are directed to different purposes, but they are not identical and presumably never will become identical."

The Provost Marshal General said:

Corrects Erroneous Impression.

"An erroneous impression is current that the 'non-productive list' of occupations contained in the Provost Marshal General's 'work or fight' regulation of last May, (Section 121 A of the Selective Service regulations,) corresponds to the group of industries omitted from the 'preference list' announced by the Chairman of the War Industries Board on Sept. 9. Because the former list was brief, (only five classes of occupations,) while the latter group is very large, (including all industries except the seventy priority clauses enumerated,) and because the announcement of Sept. 9 stated that the 'preference list' is the 'basis for industrial exemption from the draft,' some persons have formed the impression that the small list of five 'non-productive' occupations has suddenly been enlarged by the Provost Marshal General to include the extensive group of industries omitted by the Chairman of the War Industries Board.

"This impression that the 'non-productive' list has been enlarged at all, and particularly that it is now identical with 'non priority' industries, is so erroneous and misleading that it calls for prompt repudiation. The 'non-productive' list of five classified occupations has not been enlarged, and it will not be enlarged without the amplest and most explicit notice. Selective Boards are expressly directed, until further notice, to bring no other occupation under the 'work or fight' order except those expressly listed.

"What, then is the distinction between these two groups? The War Industries Board is charged with determining the principles upon which fuel, power, transportation, materials, capital and labor ought to be allocated to the several industries most essential to the war program. An industry omitted from the list is, therefore, in the position of not being entitled to a priority privilege. The relation of that list to the Selective Service System is that an industry included in it is thereby recommended to the district boards as being a 'necessary' industry; and the district boards may take advantage of that recommendation in determining whether an indispensable man in such an industry should be placed in a deferred class on that ground.

"Work or Fight" Situation.

"But there are of course many scores, perhaps hundreds, of industries not positively essential to the war program nor to the maintenance of national interest during the emergency. In those industries are, or will be, millions of registrants deferred on grounds of dependency, and many others in class 1 without deferment. At this point the 'work or fight' order comes into play, but to only a very few classes of occupations—five in all, expressly enumerated in that order, and to a relatively small number of individuals. Among this extensive and unlisted group of 'non-priority' industries it finds a very few which it designates as 'non-productive,' meaning in general those occupations in which the man power within draft age could better, during the emergency, be replaced by women's work or by older men, or boys.

"The policy involved is that those men of draft age would serve the country best by getting out of those occupations, either into the military forces or into some other occupation. Now this other occupation may be in a priority industry or in a non-priority industry. The 'work or fight' order does not prescribe any occupation for them to get into. There are plenty of non-priority industries to get into, though naturally they would do well to seek out a priority industry, if one is available. But the 'work or fight' order does not attempt to dictate on that point; it merely gives them the option of getting out of the 'non-productive' occupation or of losing the benefit of their deferred classification or their high order number.

"Thus the War Industries Board is concerned merely with strengthening the priority position of a limited number of industries at the top of the scale, so to speak, in relation to war needs; while the Provost Marshal General's regulation is concerned mainly with strengthening the army by taking the registrants who choose to stay in a small number of occupations at the bottom of the scale. The whole range of occupations in between the two lists remains open to receive those who may leave the five occupations named in the 'work or fight' order.

"Lawyers, for example, are not mentioned in the 'preference list,' hence a lawyer could presumably not obtain a priority order for the transportation of a set of office furniture. Nor are lawyers mentioned in the 'non-productive' list; hence, a lawyer deferred on grounds of dependency does not have to give up his occupation in order to retain his deferment. On the other hand, pool rooms are not on 'the preference list,' while they do appear in the 'non-productive' list; hence, a registrant pool room keeper not only could not obtain a priority order for the transportation of his poolroom furniture, but he must either go into some other occupation or lose his deferment, if any.

"The two groups (non-priority and non-productive), therefore, not only are directed to different purposes, but they are not identical, and presumably never will become identical. Certainly the public is entitled to understand that no additions will be made to the 'non-productive' list without ample and explicit notice."

Status of Mexicans.

To inform Mexican citizens as to the precise operation of the Selective Draft Law, Secretary Lansing has sent a telegram to Ambassador Fletcher at Mexico City quoting a ruling of the Provost Marshal General. This was done in order to allay apprehension on the part of Mexican citizens who may desire to come to the United States. The telegram follows:

"Following ruling Sept. 10 of Provost Marshal General on Selective Draft law, as amended: 'It will be necessary for all Mexican citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 who are in the United States on Sept. 12 to present themselves for registration on that day. A Mexican citizen who comes to the United States after Sept. 12 is not required to register, unless he declares his intention to become a citizen of the United States, or unless a later proclamation shall require the registration of persons of his age in the United States.

"Under the Selective Service law and regulations any nondeclarant Mexican citizen who registers may be exempted from performing military duty in the forces of the United States, unless he waives his right thereto, or neglects to return his questionnaire, and in the latter event local boards are authorized, under the regulations, to consider the case for such exemption, notwithstanding the registrant's failure to make a claim therefor. Under a recent Act of Congress, any declarant Mexican citizen may be relieved from liability to military service upon filing an affidavit withdrawing his intention to become a citizen of the United States and claiming such relief from liability to military service.'"

The State Department was informed by cable today that Ambassador Fletcher was the first person to register under the new military draft law, at the Consulate General in Mexico City, followed by all staff members at the embassy, consuls, and consular officers who had not registered under the previous draft. The message declared the registration in the Mexico City district would include every American of draft age, as "indicative of the patriotism of the entire American colony in this district."

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 12.—The exodus of Mexican laborers to Mexico for fear they would be inducted into the American Army was checked by the proclamation issued in Spanish by Brig. Gen. J. J. Hornbrook, district commander, who assured all Mexican citizens the act of registering would not induct them into the army.

MANY PROMINENT MEN REGISTER FOR DRAFT

Alfred E. Smith, Candidate for Governor, Gets a Blue Card—Rockefeller Recorded in Advance.

Among the thousands who registered for the selective service in New York yesterday were many prominent citizens, among them a large number of Federal, State and city officials. Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic candidate for Governor, was one of the last to register last night. He arrived from Syracuse at 7:30 o'clock and proceeded immediately to 1 Henry Street, where he registered and received his blue card.

Other prominent citizens who registered yesterday were Clarence E. Mackey, United States Judges Martin T. Manton and John C. Knox of the Southern District; William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.; Dwight W. Morrow of J. P. Morgan & Co., Supreme Court Justice Cropsey of Brooklyn, who announces that he would waive all claims for exemption and try to get to the front as a private; Borough President Bruckner of the Bronx, George F. Baker, Jr.; Percy A. Rockefeller, George M. Cohan, Enrico Caruso and John McCormack.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who lives in Draft District 159, did not register yesterday, as was stated in the afternoon papers. He received special permission to register last Tuesday before leaving town on an important business mission. He registered at 121 East Fifty-first Street.

In Brooklyn among the registrants were United States Judge Edward Garvin, United States District Attorney Melville J. France, and a score of borough officials.

Of the staff of District Attorney Swann fifty-seven registered yesterday. It was stated that every member of the Homicide Bureau was in the draft.

The members of the British, French, Italian, and Canadian missions now in this country were permitted, through the courtesy of Draft Director Conboy, to register at the Draft Director's office in the Hall of Records Building. About 400 of these members had registered in the first three hours and many of them appeared in military and naval uniforms and wearing their war decorations. The first to register was Lieutenant Charles Monnet, 33 years old, member of the 175th French Infantry. Lieutenant Monnet has received the Croix de Guerre and other decorations. Others who registered were Captain T[illegible], the Italian flier; Colonel Barbato, and Captain Savina, all three of whom are connected with an Italian mission now here for the purchase of artillery and munitions.

CARUSO REGISTERS EARLY.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Sept. 12.—Enrico Caruso of New York, the famous tenor, was among the 3,700 to register in the draft here today. He came by automobile, arriving at the Town Hall about 10 o'clock. After answering all the questions put to him by one of the women registers, he made a number of drawings of himself, with his signature attached, which he presented to some of the registers and others in the hall, after which he took his departure for New York.

Timothy F. Crowley of New York, whose home is here, made a cartoon of the tenor, unknown to him, while Caruso was registering.

From Detroit to See Liberty Statue.

Never before away from Detroit, his native town, "Daddy" Cook, 73 years old, has come to New York to fulfill the ambition of his life in seeing the Statue of Liberty. Even now the privilege would not have been granted to him but for the appreciation of his comrade war workers in the United Motors Company, who contributed to the fund which is giving him and his wife a holiday. Last night they went to the theatre and today will sail down the bay to see the symbol of the liberty for which he and his fellows are working back home. Then he will leave for Detroit.

OPEN SPEEDWAY TO AUTOS.

Two Magistrates Decide It Is Not Restricted to Horse-Drawn Vehicles.

Following the decision of Magistrate Simpson in the Washington Heights Court last Monday, that the Harlem Speedway could not be confined to the use of horsemen, motorists have been using that thoroughfore daily. Few of the drivers have been molested.

In a second test case yesterday, Charles Strathmann of 156 East 120th Street was dismissed by Magistrate Groehl in the West Side Court. The Magistrate said

"I am convinced that the Legislature intended that the Speedway shall, excepting for the hours provided for horse training exercises, be used for pleasure vehicular traffic of all kinds, and the words in the section, 'horse-drawn pleasure vehicles,' were intended to exclude commercial vehicles and not pleasure vehicles." Magistrate Groehl added that at the time the law was passed automobiles were not in common use.

Assemblyman William C. Amos of the Eleventh Assembly District, who has been a consistent opponentof the ban on automobiles using the Speedway, said that as it stands now the Speedway is practically abandoned as a thoroughfare for horse-drawn vehicles.

This is the second decision within a week dismissing complaints against persons summoned to court for operating automobiles on the Speedway.

VICTORY IS NEAR, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

REJECTS ANY COMPROMISE

"Heaven Grant That We Fight Through to the End," Without Negotiation.

TRIBUTE TO AMERICANS

Those at Front Advance Guard of 10,000,000 of the Finest Material in the World.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 12.—"Nothing but heart failure on the part of the British nation can prevent our achieving a real victory," said Premier Lloyd George in an address here today. "The news from the front is distinctly good, really good. We are going through a long tunnel, and are not yet at the end of the journey. There is some steep gradient to climb. It may be that the tunnel will be dark, but it will be short, now that the worst is over."

Mr. Lloyd George delivered his address on the occasion of his receiving the freedom of the city, for which purpose he had journeyed to Manchester. He was warmly greeted by the citizens, who crowded the streets through which he passed and who filled the Hippodrome, where the presentation was made.

Speaking at a luncheon after the presentation of the freedom of the city, Lloyd George said:

"There are some men who say 'drop it and let us have peace by negotiation.' There is no compromise between freedom and tyranny, no compromise between light and darkness. I know that it is better to sacrifice one generation than to sacrifice liberty forever. That is what we are fighting for, and Heaven grant that we fight through to the end."

"When we suffered the reverse of March 21," the Premier said in his Hippodrome address, "we still had large reserves in this country. The Germans did not know it. I already have expressed gratitude to the people who criticized the Government on the ground that there were no reserves. These people successfully misled the Germans.

"An additional fact that depressed the Germans was the advent of the Americans. There is no finer feature in the history of English industry than the transport of the Americans across the Atlantic. The Germans did not except more than two divisions. That was another miscalculation. Hundreds of thousands are there now, and the Germans know it. They are the advance guard of 10,000,000 of the finest material in the world."

The speaker added that the British casualties in the latest offensive in France were one-fifth of what they were in 1916.

A League of Free Nations.

The Premier said he was all for a league of nations; in fact, a league already had been begun. The British Empire, he said, was a league of free nations, and the allied countries fighting the battle for international right were now a league of free nations.

"To end all wars," he said, "we must impose a durable peace upon our enemies. The Prussian military power must not only be beaten, but Germany herself must know, the German people must know that their rulers have outraged the laws of humanity and that Prussian strength cannot protect them from punishment.

"This must be the last war. Don't let us be misled by the idea that the establishment of a league of nations without power will in itself secure the world against a catastrophe. A league of nations with the Prussian military power triumphant would be a league of fox and geese—one fox and many geese. The geese would greatly diminish in numbers."

The only sure foundation for a league of nations, the Premier said, was a victory for the Allies. Peace must be of a kind to commend itself to the common-sense conscience of the nations. As a whole, it must not be dictated by extreme men on either side.

"We shall neither accept for ourselves nor impose upon our foes a Brest-Litovsk treaty," he said. "We cannot allow the 'Bolsheviks' to force on us a peace so humiliating as to dishonor the national flag and to make a repetition of the horrors of this war inevitable. When a satisfactory peace has been secured we can proceed with a clear conscience to build up a new world."

Sound, Bold Reconstruction.

The first lesson taught by the war, Mr. Lloyd George said, was the immense importance of maintaining the solidarity of the British Empire. There must he healthier conditions in the workshops, more attention to the schools; the best conditions must be initiated for production.

"It is idle to pretend that this vast convulsion has taught us nothing," he continued. "We want neither reaction nor revolution, but sound, well-advised, bold reconstruction. Win the war first, but when peace comes I don't want the nation to be taken unawares.

"There are disturbing symptoms all over Europe which those at home will be wise to note and provide against. There are atmospheric disturbances in the social and economic world. Let us take heed in time, and if we do we shall enjoy settled weather for the great harvest which is coming when the fierce heat of Summer, now beating upon us in this great war, is over and past."

The Premier recalled that his last previous visit to Manchester was paid in June, 1915, when he appealed to the engineers to organize for the war. He said he went into this work reluctantly, but having realized the character of the challenge he felt it was a thing not to be done in any half-hearted way, as the life of Great Britain, her honor, the fate of the empire, and the destiny of the human race hung on the issue of the war.

The arrival of Premier Lloyd George at Manchester yesterday was the occasion of a great popular demonstration. Thousands of girls from the munition factories, with flags and banners, were drawn up on the railway station platforms, while great crowds lined the whole route to the Mansion House, to which the Premier drove amid the cheers of the throng.

At various stopping places on the way from London to Manchester the Prime Minister received hearty receptions. At Rugby, Crewe, and Stockport some hundreds of persons had assembled. They cheered and evidently expected speeches, but the Premier, who was busy in his saloon on the train, merely bowed his thanks.

Enfranchisement of Near East.

At Crewe the Premier received addresses from three Manchester deputations, representing, respectively, the Armenian Committee, the Syrian Association, and the Zionist Committee of that city.

In his reply to the Armenians the Premier lauded their determination, and added:

"I ask you to believe that those responsible for the government of this country are not unmindful of their responsibility for your martyred race."

In his response to the Syrians, Mr. Lloyd George declared it was the hope of the British Government "that the Arabic-speaking peoples who have suffered under Turkish rule should once more enjoy the liberty which will enable them to rebuild the edifice of civilization and prosperity to which six centuries of Ottoman tyranny and misrule had brought ruin and desolation."

To the Zionists the Premier expressed sympathy with the desire of the Jewish people to regain their ancient national home, which aspiration, he said, had "found a natural response in the minds of those responsible for the government of this country, because they are in permanent accord with the sentiments of the people of Great Britain.

"I have today," he added, "had the honor of receiving addresses from representatives of the three elements most intimately concerned in the establishment of the rule of order and justice in an area which hitherto has been the prey of tyranny and outrage. The fulfillment of the historic aspiration to which you refer is an essential corollary to the necessary enfranchisement of the oppressed peoples of the Near East."

CITY IS NOT IN DANGER FROM SPANISH GRIP

Health Commissioner Says Persons Here Have Not Been Infected.

Although twenty-five cases of Spanish influenza were recently taken from a ship arriving at New York persons in this city are in no danger of an epidemic, accordingg to Dr. Royal S. Copeland, the Health Commissioner. He said that an absolutely reliable index of the possible prevalence of the disease would be many cases of pneumonia, into which the influenza develops and which makes it dangerous. As a matter of fact, at the present moment the death rate from pneumonia is half of what it was at the same time last year, and, more than that, no secondary cases have developed up to this time. That is, none of those who have arrived here with the disease have infected others.

Dr. Copeland explained that when these cases were reported the patients were not allowed to land, but were taken by the department ambulances to the Willard Parker Hospital in East Sixteenth Street, where they were isolated.

"None of them was very ill," continued the Commissioner, "and only two of them developed pnuemonia, and these two had it when they arrived. Since they have been in our care all the patients have improved, several of them having entirely recovered and sent home. These cases have been carefully followed by the department, its physicians calling upon the patients every day. At the same time Dr. William H. Park, director of the laboratories of the Department of Health, has ben studying the cases from a bacteriological standpoint and hopes to reach some conclusions as to the prevention and future treatment of the disease. At present no better advice can be given than to tell any one who actually contracts Spanish influenza to go to bed immediately and to remain quiet. The disease will normally run its course in three days. So far there is no known cure for it."

PETROGRAD IN REVOLT AGAINST BOLSHEVIKI

Peasants Said to Have Entered City and Won Much Popular Backing.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Russian peasants who revolted against the Bolshevist Government a few days ago are reported to have entered Petrograd and to have been joined by a large part of the population, says a dispatch from Copenhagen to the Central News Agency.

Severe fighting is proceeding in the city and fires have broken out at several places.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 12.—Russian White Guards have formed an unexpected front in the Arzamas district of the Russian province of Nizhni-Novgorod, according to a dispatch from Moscow. Six districts in that province have united against the Russian Soviet Government.

Peasants in the Province of Kazan are arming against the Bolsheviki and, the dispatch adds, Soviet forces are being formed to suppress the revolt.

OPPOSES AIR DEPARTMENT.

Acting Secretary of War Crowell Declines to Indorse Pending Bill.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Creation of a separate Department of Aeronautics, with a Cabinet officer at its head, as recommended by the Senate Military Sub-Committee on Aviation, is opposed by the War Department. In a letter to Chairman Chamberlain of the Military Committee, Acting Secretary Crowell declined today to indorse the pending bill for that purpose, expressing the opinion that the measure was wrong in principle.

"As far as the War Department is concerned," Secretary Crowell said, "the organization of a Department of Aeronautics, separate and distinct from the War Department and containing the military activities not under the control of the Secretary of War, is believed to be essentially wrong in principle.

"The President has nominated and the Senate has confirmed the appointment of Secretary John D. Ryan as Assistant Secretary of War, who is director of the air service for the War Department. By placing in his hands, under the supervision of the Secretary of War and the President, complete control of our air service, it is believed the essential points aimed at by the bill in question are covered in the best possible way."

OUST TSCHAIKOVSKY, THEN REINSTATE HIM

ALLIED ENVOYS INTERVENE

Their Demand for Restoration Complied With, Washington Thinks the Incident Closed.

ARCHANGEL, Sept. 12, (Associated Press.)—After a conference with the Entente allied diplomatic and military chiefs the Tschaikovsky Provisional Government, which recently was overthrown, was reseated today and will continue to direct the affairs in the region of the north, with the advice of the Allies.

The American troops who landed here have been reviewed by David R. Francis, the American Ambassador, and the commanders of the allied forces. They were enthusiastically cheered as they marched through the streets of Archangel for the first time.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—A report of the downfall and subsequent reseating of the Tschaikovsky Government at Archangel was received today by the State Department. Officials here said that until the Government of all Russia was established such events were to be expected, as the people were ardent politicians, with different factions seeking control.

Tschaikovsky and five or six other members of the Government were overthrown by a rival faction at Archangel on Sept. 8. They were turned over to a group of the late Soviet members who are occupying an island off Archangel. This was done, it was believed here, more to keep them out of the way than to do them personal injury, for this remnant of the Soviet Government is regarded as entirely innocuous.

After the arrests a report was made to the representatives of the Entente Nationals at Archangel. The victors of this political skirmish, it is understood here, were not hostile to the Entente or to Russia's welfare, but simply wanted control of the Government. They are anti-German and anti-Bolshevist, and have their own plan for the rehabilitation of Russia.

The representatives of the Allies at Archangel, believing, however, that the Tschaikovsky Government was best equipped and organized to aid in the saving of Russia, demanded that Tschaikovsky and his colleagues be restored to power. As this has been done the incident is regarded as closed.

GEN. JANIN ARRIVES HERE.

French Soldier to Command Czechoslovak Army in Russia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Major Gen. Jules Janin of the French Army passed through Washington today en route to Siberia, where he will take command of the Czechoslovak Army in Russia.

As General Janin was tactical instructor at Petrograd before the war, his experience with the Russian Army makes him intimately acquainted with the military possibilities of that country. At the outbreak of the war he served at the French front. Shortly afterward he became Assistant Chief of Staff of General Joffre. In 1916 he was head of the French Military Mission to Petrograd. Retaining that commission until 1917, he returned early the latter year to France, where he took command of the Czechoslovak troops in France. He retains command of that body. General Janin will be accompanied to Siberia by General Stefanic of the Czechoslovak Army.

The Czechoslovak Army in Russia is to continue its operations during the Winter, but to make this possible it is necessary for Japan and the United States to send immediately to these troops supplies for the cold season. The Czechoslovak commanders have also asked that allied forces be dispatched to their aid on the Volga front. This question, it is understood, will be decided by the Council of Allied Commanders in Siberia, under the presidency of General Ontani, the Japanese Commander in Chief.

Contact between the allied contingents operating on the Archangel front and the Czechoslovaks on the Volga River is not expected to be established before Winter. Contact has been re-established, however, between the Czechoslovak forces in Eastern Siberia with the main body in Western Siberia and along the Volga, and this has made possible the assumption of command of the entire Czechoslovak Army by General Diedrichs, who has been in charge at Vladivostok. He will serve under General Janin.

VLADIVOSTOK, Sept. 2, (Associated Press.)—Colonel George H. Emerson of St. Paul, Minn., who last April was sent to Vologda, Russia, by Secretary of State Lansing, and since that time has been marooned, has passed through Kiakhta on a special train and is due to arrive at Harbin tonight. This means that the Trans-Siberian Railroad is in friendly hands from Vladivostok to Vologda, beyond which town the Czechoslovaks have established a new front and are pressing toward Perm.

In the Amur River region the Entente allied forces are slowly making progress, their scouts finding no evidence of serious efforts being made by the Bolsheviki to oppose them.

HOLD 22 ALLIED CITIZENS.

British and French Imprisoned by Reds in Petrograd Fortress.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 12.—Eleven Englishmen and eleven French citizens have been arrested and imprisoned in the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul in Petrograd, according to apparently reliable information received here today from the Russian capital.

The Englishmen incarcerated include R. H. B. Lockhart, the British Consul General at Moscow, who was condemned to death by the Bolshevist Government, but who escaped execution as the result of the intervention of all the neutral diplomatic representatives.

POLES, TOO, ASK RECOGNITION.

Their National Aims Presented to the American Government.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Ramon Dmowski, one of the leaders of the Polish organization seeking recognition of a free and independent Poland to be restored with the territorial limits of the former kingdom of Poland, called on Secretary Lansing today to present and discuss the claims of his people.

The United States Government has expressed itself as deeply in sympathy with these national aspirations, but the Poles have not been able so far, it is understood, to present arguments equal to those advanced by the Czechoslovaks, who recently won recognition as a nation.

The chief claim of the Czechs that established their rights to recognition in the minds of the allied Governments was that they had an organized army in the field fighting the Central Powers, a thing the Poles have been unable to accomplish. The Polish leaders have been assured, however, by representatives of the Entente nations that one of the terms of peace shall be the re-establishment of a national Poland.

CZECHOSLOVAKS TO MEET.

Paderewski to Speak at Meeting Sunday Afternoon.

A mass meeting of Czechoslovaks will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in Carnegie Hall, under the auspices of the National War Savings Committee and other patriotic organizations, including those representing Rumania and Poland.

The chief speakers will be Professor Thomas G. Masaryk, President of the Czechoslovak National Council, and Ignace J. Paderewski, American representative of the Polish National Committee. A long musical program is promised.

Russians to Attend Labor Meeting.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Passports have been granted to the Russian Social Revolutionary delegates to the Interallied Labor Conference, which will begin its sessions in London next Tuesday. The delegates have been at Stockholm for some weeks awaiting permission to proceed to England, where they are expected next week.

Livingston Re-elected in Kings.

FRENCH UNMOVED BY BURIAN OFFER

Regard It as the Most Pretentious Utterance of Central Powers in Peace Offensive.

ALSO MOST TRANSPARENT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Count Burian's statement in Vienna that the time has come for a "calm exchange of views" concerning peace has been received in France with much more calm than he could desire. It is looked upon as the third and most pretentious utterance of the Central Powers in the present peace offensive. The other two were those of Dr. Solf and Prince Max of Baden.

The chief comment in Paris is that Burian is disappoining because he does not offer even the academic interest derived from puzzling out a new device. It is the same old trick without the addition of a single novelty. Paris wants to know why the Central Powers cannot show the same ingenuity in fabricating new peace hints as in devising atrocities.

There is absolutely no reaction of the French people to Burian. First, because he is so transparent. Second, because even a peace suggestion cleverly made could not now make headway against the indignation of the French at the needless devastation wrought by the German armies in the present retreat.

The French armies are composed very largely of peasants and farmers to whom tillable land, farm houses, and barns are sacred things. Four years of war have not dulled their senses to cruelty and wantonness. A farm house, once a comfortable and prosperous home but now a heap of ruins, has the same emotional appeal to the farmer soldier as a wrecked cathedral to the rest of the world. So the French troops and people are more determined at this moment than ever before to defeat the enemy with guns and bayonets. Meantime the peace suggestions of Burian and others mean nothing.

Strange as it may seem, however, this very devastation of recent weeks by the retreating foe is linked up as a part of the present peace move in the German plan. Three reasons are given here for the devastation. The first two are obvious—to make the advance of the Allies across the ruined country more difficult and to further carry out the German determination to leave France impoverished and possibly end the war for Germany's future economic benefit. The less obvious reason attributed to the enemy is that the devastation will create discouragement among the French, making them more receptive to peace hints. Exact reverse has been the case.

No previous peace move of the Central Powers has been more transparent in all its parts than this one. Paris is amusing itself by piecing those parts together, with the Burian statement as the central fragment around which fit other pieces of the puzzle that is no puzzle. The permitted talk of the retirement of Chancellor von Hertling and the booming of Dr. Solf to succeed him is another piece.

Hertling has got to go to make a scapegoat for the military chiefs who failed to win the promised victory this year and capture Paris and the Channel ports. The only settled, unchanging factor of the whole German policy is to leave the military rulers always untouched and uncriticised and try to fool the people by making civil political changes whenever the armies fail.

At the present time every feature of the German civil government system is under severe home criticism, with no restraint by the authorities. The food control and many other activities of the civilian officials are bitterly denounced, but not one word can be said against Hindenburg and Ludendorff. Germany is now entering a period of military dictatorship in form as well as in fact. Further indication of that is the fact that there is no talk of von Hintze being retired. He is the chief political tool of the General Staff in the nonmilitary affairs of the nation.

But Hertling is more than a scapegoat. He is a failure in practically every phase of domestic reform he has attempted. For example, since he became Chancellor the Prussian House of Lords has rejected governmental bills and so-called franchise reform six times.

No improvement in principles is to be expected if Solf succeeds Hertling. Only chance methods. The indications are that Solf will be more precise in his offers concerning Belgium and attempt to make definite use of the Belgian question for laying the foundation of future demands for the restoration to Germany of her African colonies.

HOLLAND'S NEW CABINET.

Press of All Shades of Opinion Dissatisfied with It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 12.—THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent has talked with various important Dutch political leaders regarding the new Cabinet, and the general view appears that it exists for want of a better.

In the space of two months several political leaders were asked by the Queen to form a Cabinet and refused. Riuys de Beerenbrouck, who is an unknown political quantity, with no reputation for strength, and is hardly a man to inspire confidence, has finally consented to form a Right Cabinet. The new Foreign Minister, Jonkheer van Karnebeek, was the last man on the long list and accepted the post. He has a reputation for cleverness, but has no diplomatic experience, and is purported to have pro-German sympathies. But the whole Cabinet will doubtless endeavor to assume an appearance of pedantic neutrality, in order not to be taxed with pronounced sympathies for one side or the other.

A prominent ex-Minister who was asked to form a Cabinet and refused said that in view of present circumstances a coalition Government would have been far preferable, but that the Social Democrats absolutely refused to work on this basis and preferred to become a fighting opposition, hoping to strengthen their party in this way.

Many Socialists, this informant said, would have joined the now small Bolshevist Party had the Socialists consented to a coalition. At present there was a bare majority in the Chamber and a doubtful majority in the country, so that the Right would have preferred a strong coalition, letting the Socialists share the responsibility, difficulties, and problems with which any Government was confronted today.

"Was it necessary," asks the Nieuwe Courant, to wait two months for this combination?" The newspapers of all shades are very dissatisfied.

PRIETH TRIAL DEFENSE ON.

Newark Publishers Fight Charges of Conspiracy.

The defense will start today in the trial of Benedict and Edwin S. Prieth, publishers of the New Jersey Freie Zeitung, on charges of conspiracy to violate the Espionage act. Federal Haight in Newark yesterday dismissed the indictment against Hans von Hundleshausen and Henry Waechter, editors, on the ground that no evidence had been produced against them.

Those now on trial are the Prieths and William von Katzier. Judge Haight refused to dismiss the indictment as against all the defendants, but said he would entertain a motion later. Otto Stiefel, counsel for the defendants, contended that the Government had failed to connect any of his clients with the authorship of articles in the Freie Zeitung.

Judge Haight admitted in evidence the entire articles, from which the Government submitted excerpts. Professor Harold Bender of Princeton testified that the translations made by the Government's expert, Richard B. Appleton, were correct.

THEIR FORECASTS RIDICULED

Hertling Government Assailed for Incapacity—Signs of Official Uneasiness.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—The political battle in Germany is increasing in bitterness. It has become, frankly, an onslaught by the moderate factors in Germany against the Pan Germans.

Undoubtedly the great military failure on the western front is one of the main causes of this campaign against the Junker extremists, but there are also important domestic reasons for it. In front of these there is the Pan German stand against franchise reform in Prussia. The Vorwärts yesterday printed on its front page in big type a vigorous appeal by the executives of the Prussian and German Socialist Parties against unworthy gaming with the people's rights being indulged in by Prussia's reactionary upper house. The appeal condemns the amazing blindness of the Government, describes the bitter feeling over the deception which is now prevalent among the people, and points to the damage that is done to the cause of peace by the wild-minded Pan Germans.

"In the name of millions who stand behind us," the executives call for the dissolution of the lower Prussian House, and concluded with "Long live democracy and peace!"

The Vorwärts itself gives prominence to comment supporting Professor Delbrück's statement that the only way to peace is to get rid of Pan Germanism.

In many papers the Pan Germans are being attacked by the reproduction of their own pre-war and early war predictions and jingo and imperialistic utterances.

The Pan German papers naturally blame the Social Democrats for endeavoring to bring about the fall of the Hertling Government, but the Berliner Tageblatt rightly points out that the Junkers are going the right way to achieve that by rejecting Prussian franchise reform, thus making the Chancellor's position impossible if he sticks to his own words that he stands or falls by that reform.

Another cause of the present discontent and strife is the complete failure of the Government to achieve anything noteworthy, and the fact that the Administration contains two prominent Reischtag Progressives, Herr von Payer and Herr von Friedberg makes the deception all the more bitter. The Frankfurter Zeitung roundly condemns the Hertling Government and refers to the bitter disappointment which its inactivity and incapacity have caused.

"The first ten months of the Hertling Administration have not led us forward but backward, it declares.

Behind the scenes it is reported that Baron von Richthoven and Herr Erzberger are hard at work. The former's newspaper, the Boersen Kurier, attacks the Chancellor.

It is perfectly clear, too, that the powers that be are exceedingly troubled about the attitude in general of the people. The Kaiser's two visits to Essen are as good as confirmation of the reports of the serious trouble lately experienced there, where, as reported some days ago, 20,000 to 30,000 workers were suddenly uniformed and sent to the front for some unknown but serious reason.

A few days after the signing of the extended treaties with Russia it is certainly curious to find the officially inspired Germania relieving its burdened soul of this utterance:

"We would draw attention to the danger of Bolshevism to Europe and to the whole world. The Russian revolution has unveiled a social problem for us and shows us how it has become evident in other lands in one form or another, perhaps even during the war. The conception of property in Germany and in other war-waging lands is in a highly precarious state and is tottering. Then there is the growing discontent of so many who have suffered heavy losses during the war, while others have obtained profit for themselves and their relatives.

"That the disinherited should long for a division of the possessions of this life cannot be wondered at. There can be no doubt that the social problem is making itself seriously felt in Germany."

The Pan German Deutsche Zeitung rails at Czernin for being a brilliant second to Professor Delbrück, while the Hamburger Nachrichten is exceedingly angry with Baron Burian for encouraging the enemy by spreading von Kühlmann's belief that the war cannot end by a military decision and thus persuading the Entente to a still greater degree that the Central Empires are beginning to have doubts regarding the outcome of the struggle.

Altogether the situation in the enemy's land is in a nice muddle and results can hardly fail to be interesting.

Singing in City Hall Park Today.

Other concerts at 3:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon are to be held in Central Park, Battery Park, Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and Poe Park, the Bronx.

GERMAN WORKMEN DEMAND MORE FOOD

HIGH WAGES SWALLOWED UP

Rising Discontent Everywhere, Unionists Assert—Must Have More Bread and Potatoes.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—More potatoes and bread! That is the demand made on behalf of Germany's working classes by the country's trade unions in a bitter appeal sent to the Imperial Chancellor. The appeal, which Vorwärts prints, speaks of "the rising discontent in all parts of the country" and of clamant protests and angry demands which reach the trade unions from the workers and give evidence of "a most serious state of affairs."

Food conditions, so far as the working classes are concerned, the appeal says, have steadily become worse. All increases in wages have been long ago swallowed up by the rising cost of the necessaries of life. The policy of the Government leads to constant raising of prices.

"While millions of men," says the appeal, "must give their blood for the Fatherland on the battlefield, it must be regarded as the eternal shame of our time that their dependents at home are impoverished by our own people, who, by heartless profiteering, sap the last strength of the poor. The well-to-do so benefit by secret traffic in food that they do not feel the effect of the meatless weeks and other privations, but the poor and the middle classes have to go for half a month without even a single miserable piece of meat."

Under present conditions, the appeal points out, bread and potatoes are the mainstay of the working classes, and it calls upon the Chancellor to increase the rations of those commodities, as the quantities which have been given during the last year have proved to be hopelessly inadequate. An increase of the potato ration from seven to ten pounds per head weekly is especially insisted on as an "absolute necessity." The appeal concludes by warning the Chancellor that "there is no doubt but we are driving toward affairs which will be fateful unless the Government at last decides to break with the policy of favoring the producing interests and to take into account the vital needs of the people."

Woman Pinned Under Auto.

RAHWAY, N. J., Sept. 12.—Mrs. James Dolan of 257 Augusta Street, South Amboy, is dying in the City Hospital from injuries suffered when she was pinned under an overturned automobile yesterday. Her husband was driving the car toward Elizabeth, when a motor cycle running in the same direction struck the front wheel of the automobile, throwing the machine out of control and causing it to turn turtle.

CABLE CENSORSHIP.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—The Daily News, referring to its dispatch on the torpedoing of the Mount Vernon, says:

"The following special despatch to The Daily News was cabled from Brest last Saturday by way of the Naval Censor's office in Washington, as the United States Government regulations require. At the same time The Daily News was notified by cable from its Paris office that the dispatch had been sent. After waiting two days inquiry was made in Washington why the dispatch was not forwarded by the Naval Censor. After an all-day search it was found late yesterday afternoon in the hands of the Naval Censor stationed in the office of Secretary Daniels, it having been, according to the report furnished to The Daily News, misplaced among the censor's papers. The dispatch, after another delay of nearly twenty hours, was received over the Western Union wires shortly before noon today. Complaint has been made to Secretary Daniels by The Daily News in regard to this kind of censorship."

Decrease in Spain's Commerce.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—The Official Gazette publishes statistics showing a marked decrease in Spain's imports and exports for the first seven months of the year, notably as compared to 1916. The decrease for imports of raw materials, manufactured goods, and foodstuffs was from 539,000,000 pesetas to 328,000,000 pesetas. The exports decreased during the same period from 808,000,000 to 506,000,000 pesetas.

Uncle Sam takes care to select shoes in which our soldier-boys can cover long distances. The "Stride" is a last patterned after our soldiers' "Munson" last, only with added snap for civilians. It is a sure-enough military shoe with a toe plenty wide, a full tread, and a sturdy heel. It will add horse-power to your foot-power, for it makes nothing of the day's work of a civilian.

"Pep"= short for "pepper" and The American Magazine

HARRY Witwer has "pep". So have his stories. He started as a soda jerker. He tried job after job, getting more experience and less money each change.

He says he has no patience with the fellow who takes wallops philosophically, for the man who figures in the payroll is the man who gives wallops.

Witwer tells his own story in The American Magazine for October.[1] And it's a story worth telling, for Witwer is one of the best paid writers in the country. Read this tale of his and you'll know why editors pay so much for his stuff.

So with Root, the man who makes bees work for him to the tune of a million dollars a year.[2] He has "pep"—so have his bees.

So with Rosen who sells $40,000 worth of life insurance every working day.[3]

You'd love to have such men talk to you. You can have them, right in your own sitting-room, in your own time, in any number of The American Magazine. Try it with the October number.

Undoubtedly many vain and foolish young women are engaged in war work. Undoubtedly also the stress of real endeavor might tend to steady and strengthen them. There is material for admirable satire, and for an inspiring object lesson, in the main situation of "Crops and Croppers," with which Mr. Iden Payne launched his new repertory company last night at the Belmont. But somehow the piece went wrong, in spite of many clever bits of dialogue and a company of great inherent possibilities.

At the end of the second of three acts the heroine opened her wide eyes wider and announced with an air of awe-inspiring discovery that she was "a silly and extravagant little fool." To the audience the fact had been patent from the first five minutes of acquaintance with her. The last act was devoted to showing her return to normal sense—or rather to her sudden acquisition of it. It was the best act of the play; but, if we may shift the vernacular of the title of the play from the barn to the stable, the net result will probably be a cropper.

The plot of the play may be very briefly stated. Our heroine has renounced society (the male half of it having departed for the training camp) in order to win the war with food. The first act shows the monstrous folly of her purchase of a farm, and the second act her even more monstrous extravagance in managing it. Financial ruin descends on her, and, taking refuge in a cottage, she works with native farm women putting up preserves. Her love story parallels her war work. In the first act she is writing letters to seven young soldiers, one for each day of the week, being formally engaged to one of them. By the last act she has fallen sincerely in love with a French soldier who has labored side by side with her as farm hand.

These few events are rather barely stated. It is by no means evident how the extravagant featherbrain of the first two acts evolves into the industrious and able business woman of the last act. Nor is it shown how the girl who let herself in for a wholly unreal and vapid engagement to an American soldier boy came by the genuine passion for her poilu. It is not inconceivable that going broke may transform essential character; but audiences are from Missouri—they want to be shown. Instead of the very needful establishment and development of character we have floods of talk, the intent of which is to divert us by the exhibition of silliness in our young war workers. There were moments of real wit and satire; but for the most part the comedy remained on the level of graceful and ladylike amateur theatricals.

It is possible that the artificiality of the play was intensified by the stage direction. Mr. Iden Payne is at times one of the most skilful and subtle of our producers; but there are other times when he seems the most wrong-headed and ineffectual. For two acts not a single actor seemed capable of speaking a natural word. Miss Huban, who played the heroine, was an especial offender. In the last act matters mended. In particular, Georges Flateau as the young Frenchman played the scene of his lovemaking with genuine charm and fire. But that moment of reality only emphasized the impression that the play as a whole was pitched in the wrong key.

As for the rest of the company, their names are good and sufficient guarantee of their ability, but not one of them last night seemed really himself. For the present our main occasion for congratulation lies in the fact that the organization at the Belmont is obviously capable of fine things, and must eventually achieve them.

TO STAGE 'THE BETTER 'OLE'

Coburns to Produce Bairnsfather War Comedy at the Greenwich.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Coburn of the Coburn Players, who have taken over the Greenwich Village Theatre for the coming season, announced yesterday that their first production at that house will be the Bairnsfather war comedy, "The Better 'Ole," which has been playing in London for more than a year. The rights to the piece have been eagerly sought after here.

"The Better 'Ole" is based upon the Bairnsfather cartoons, and is the work of Captain Bairnsfather and Captain Bruce Elliot. The first performance at the Greenwich will be given early next month.

Women Police Form Auto Squad.

Thirty women, led by Captain Jessie Herman—members of the Women's Police Reserves of Far Rockaway—visited Inspector Dwyer's office at Police Headquarters last night, to complete arrangements to start a class in automobile driving, mechanics, and repairs. They intend to form an ambulance unit of the Women's Police Reserves, and they have been assigned to headquarters in the Arsenal Station in Central Park. The instructor will be Sergeant Brennan, who is an expert on automobile engines. The first instruction will be on next Monday afternoon.

MYSTERY COMEDY IS 'ANOTHER MAN'S SHOES'

Aphasia the Theme and Mistaken Identity the Humor of Play with Lionel Atwill Hero.

ANOTHER MAN'S SHOES, a comedy in three acts by Laura Hinkley and Mabel Ferris; based upon a story by Miss Hinkley. At the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre.

Dick	Lionel Atwill
Miss Podmore	Ethel Wilson
Mrs. Wolfe	Lucia Moore
Anne	Carol Lloyd
Hughes	Paul Porter
Dora	Elsie Mackay
Dr. Worrall	George Backus
Slade	Richard Taber
Mr. Wolfe	Aubrey Beattie
Dawson	Erville Alderson
Miles	Cyril Raymond
Mrs. Milson	Gilda Leary

It is the not unfamiliar dramatic idea of aphasia which forms the basis of the new comedy, "Another Man's Shoes," but by carrying the idea a little further than previous dramatists, the two authoresses have managed to write a play which is constantly interesting and which becomes more and more suspensive as the evening progresses. The case of Richard Craven was a complicated one. As the doctor explained at the conclusion of the play, it was an instance of "complete disassociation of personality, alternating amnesia, sometimes inaccurately called double aphasia."

All of this, however, is not revealed until the end of the play, and is preceded by three acts during which the audience is permitted to guess to its heart's content. Strictly speaking, the audience guesses for two acts, for the piece begins rather slowly and does not really gather momentum until the second act. From that point, however, it holds the attention tightly, turning first this way, then that. It is, in effect, a mystery comedy.

The hero of "Another Man's Shoes" loses his identity by reason of a blow on the head, and recovers it through a railroad wreck twelve years later. In the interim he has begun life anew, and is the head of both a household and a business. The audience is introduced to him as he is emerging from the unconsciousness induced by the wreck, when, in his real identity, he knows nothing of the responsibilities which he has acquired in the preceding twelve years.

Upon this foundation there are superimposed the customary humors of mistaken identity, although there is fortunately somewhat less of this sort of thing than one might expect. The best part of the play is its mystery, which, as has been said, begins to deepen in the second act, and holds well for the remainder of the piece. The scientific accuracy of the authors' premise has long made aphasia and amnesia popular subjects for both drama and fiction, and doubtless the play is scientifically correct also in restoring both identities to its hero at the end of the play. Dramatically, however, it seemed rather an obvious reaching after a satisfactory ending.

The bulk of the acting falls upon Lionel Atwill, who is on the stage practically all of the evening. The part, of course, is quite easily within his grasp, and he does not have to extend himself greatly to give an excellent performance. His work is particularly notable for its restraint in the comedy moments, for much of the piece could have become farce in the hands of a less finished player.

The acting is satisfactory throughout, with Paul Porter and Richard Taber contributing two particularly good characterizations. Elsie Mackey, in the leading female rôle, is lovely to look upon at all times, but good to listen to only part of the time.

San Carlo Co. in "La Traviata."

"La Traviata" was added to the San Carlo operas at the Shubert last evening, with Marcella Craft, Romeo Boscacci, and Angelo Antola in Verdi's tuneful retelling of Dumas's "Camille." Miss Craft made Violetta dramatically vital and not a mere singing doll; she gave the "Ah, Fors e Lui" seated at her empty banquet table, springing up at a final topnote for the contrasting "Sempre Libera." Mr. Boscacci and Mr. Antola sang agreeably, and the opera was well staged. The Shubert's large audiences have led to requests for a longer stay of Mr. Gallo's company, soon due in Boston and Quebec.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Arthur Hopkins's one-act play "Moonshine" will be on the program at the Palace next week.

The new Walker Whiteside play, "The Little Brother," has been placed in rehearsal by the Shuberts. The piece is the work of Milton Goldsmith and Benedict James, and has been produced in London.

Cyril Maude's first appearance in "The Saving Grace" will be made in Buffalo next Monday night. The play will be seen at the Empire Sept. 30.

George Harcourt is now a member of the cast of "Maytime" at the Broadhurst.

The Griffith film, "Hearts of the World," is now in its last weeks at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre. A film version of "Salome," with Theda Bara as its star, will begin an engagement there on Oct. 6.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Italian testimonial concert with Caruso as star, which was postponed last night in Central Park because of unfavorable weather, will be held next week Thursday. Reserved seat tickets will hold good then, and it is promised that Caruso will sing.

A war benefit by McCormack and Galli-Curci for the old 69th Regiment's wounded men in France has been arranged for Sunday evening, Sept. 22, at the Hippodrome. Carolina Lazzari and Rudolph Ganz also volunteered yesterday for McCormack's program.

[illegible], one of eighty-two competitors for the [illegible] Festival Chamber Music Prize, heard yesterday that his quartet had won second place and would be played at Pittsfield, Mass., next Monday. Mr. Reiser is assistant conductor at the Strand.

The POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE, COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING, 85-99 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., has established for high school graduates a unit of the Students' Army Training Corps.

Every regularly enrolled student in the technical courses who passes the physical examination and is 18 years or over may, about October 1st, be inducted into the United States Army as a member of the Students' Army Training Corps. He would from that time receive the pay of a private, be supplied with the regular uniform, with lodging and subsistence, and the War Department would pay the full cost of his military and academic instruction. PERSHING ADVANCES.

There is a thrill for the American people in the news that their First Army is in battle on the St. Mihiel salient and advancing on the outer works of Metz. Hitherto American troops have co-operated with the French in the Rheims-Soissons sector and with the British in Artois. The Americans are now fighting as a homogeneous force and playing the greater part in a strategical movement, the French co-operating on their right and left. This movement is being directed by General Pershing, and the honors of victory will be his. He is attacking on a front of twelve miles, and he has his own flying corps to signal to his artillery and bomb the enemy. The Stars and Stripes are going forward after a long period of waiting, which has tried the patience of the American people. They have longed to see their own army in action, having faith in its invincibility, desiring a demonstration of its soldierly qualities, not only to impress our brave allies, but to show the Germans how the Americans, whom they have disparaged and affected to despise, can fight for a just cause. The glorious day has come at last.

It is now almost four years since the Germans tried to break through the Verdun-Toul escarpment with the design of isolating Verdun. They swarmed across the plain of the Woevre. They succeeded, although suffering heavy losses, in crossing the Meuse River and establishing themselves in St. Mihiel, which proved to be the apex of their line of advance. They could push on no further, being impotent to dislodge the French from their formidable works on the plateau scarp. Ever since those bloody days the Germans had remained in possession of St. Mihiel. Now it is reported that the French have recovered the town, and with the Americans they have beaten in both sides of the salient.

The offensive of the Americans and French bears some resemblance to the unexpected drive of Marshal Haig in Artois, when, anticipating a German withdrawal, he launched and pressed a furious attack. This may be inferred from the lack of vigor of the German defense at some points and the rapidity with which the Americans and French gained ground so long occupied by the enemy. American patrols are reported as moving on Vigneulles, which is ten miles northeast of St. Mihiel, and Thiaucourt, less than fifteen miles from Metz, is reported to have been captured.

Marshal Foch's preliminary design may have contemplated no more than the flattening out of the St. Mihiel salient, which has always been a menace to Verdun if the Germans should decide to start an offensive in force at that point. To press an advance toward Metz or the line Metz-Strassburg would be a major operation. It would have serious consequences if the movement faltered. At the same time, the American First Army with French support of the same strength could engage in operations that would require the Germans, with strategical reaction elsewhere, to reinforce their front, which has been lightly held.

IN PLACE OF GERMAN DYES.

Official reports for the fiscal year which ended with June, published a few days ago, permit a comparison which shows the growth of our new dyestuffs industry. Here are the figures:

ANILINE DYES.

Imports, 1914................	7,241,406

Our supply of these coal tar dyes formerly came from Germany, and we paid a little more than $7,000,000 a year for them. After the beginning of the war our manufacturers for a time suffered much inconvenience, but American chemists came to the rescue, capital was invested in new factories and additions to old ones, and the new industry was firmly established.

Now we not only make enough of the leading and essential colors to satisfy our own needs, but are selling to other countries, as the export statement proves, a surplus whose value exceeds that of the imports from Germany before the war. And these sales to foreign buyers are increasing, for in June, the latest month covered by the report, they were $828,801, or at the annual rate of almost $10,000,000. Germany will never regain her profitable market for dyestuffs in the United States.

THE ENEMY IN THIS TOWN.

A choice body of German patriots met in Webster Hall, East Eleventh Street, to ratify the nomination, as the Socialist candidate for Representative in Congress of the Fourteenth District, of that sometime martyr of "academic freedom," Scott Nearing. Hear the Socialist Alderman, Beckermann:

> I do not believe that there are many people in this country who think the United States should stay in the war forever, and I believe that it is vitally necessary to lay down a program of peace. * * * The Socialist Party is not a party that believes in war to the bitter end. The Socialist Party believes that the war should be brought to an end, and through negotiations with Italy, Russia, the United States, Germany, France, and Austria taking part. * * * The Socialist Party doesn't pretend to be 100 per cent. loyal.

Rapturous applause from the persons who don't pretend to be 100 per cent. loyal to the United States, being 100 per cent. loyal to Germany. The martyr of "academic freedom" proposed an interesting Bolshevist program. The "producers" must take possession of the banks, railroads, mines, factories, and other great industries. And representatives of the American—that is, German—Socialist Party must have passports from the State Department so that they may go abroad and palaver about a German peace.

Hertling and Scheidemann have no more faithful tools than these. Germany has no firmer friends. The United States, the cause of the Allies, a just and democratic peace, have no bitterer enemies.

These German Socialists, while to the misfortune of the United States they are technically citizens, are at heart and by their own words irreconcilable aliens, alien enemies. The Department of Justice, which is not averse to harassing patriotic Americans incidentally, might do worse than keep an ear open for the disloyal and treacherous purposes of these accomplices of Germany.

THE SLACKER RAIDS.

Attorney General Gregory's letter to the President justifying the slacker raids, but withholding approval from the manner in which they were conducted in New York, does not stand analysis very well. Arrests, except by "police officials of the United States "and of any State or of any county, "municipality, or other subdivision "thereof" (Section 49 of the Rules and Regulations promulgated by the President) are declared to have been illegal. That is obvious, because martial law was not invoked to make the raids. But the Attorney General says further:

> It was expected, however, that where the number detained was large this department, in making the necessary investigations would have the aid of the American Protective League, a private organization of established standing which had long been participating in the enforcement of the selective service law by express invitation of the Provost Marshal General; and that in guarding the persons taken into custody it would have the aid of units of the military and naval forces.

What else but illegalities and confusion could result from this arrangement when the dragnet was cast in a populous city like New York? Only police officers could arrest those who refused to go to the armory or to the police station for examination, but to guard suspects the American Protective League and "units of the military and naval forces" were to lend a hand. If "slackers" should prove too strong for the police officer making arrests, would the leaguers and the soldiers and sailors "stand and wait"? It would have been remarkable if they had failed to join in the arrests. They could hardly have been trained in the technical distinction laid down by the Attorney General.

Mr. Gregory does not cite any rule or regulation providing for the assistance of soldiers, sailors and members of any private organization when slacker raids were to be conducted. It is time that they had become necessary. Secretary Baker called for them in a letter of August 5 to the Department of Justice. He said that the number of slackers was large and "an indictment against the honor of the nation." "Some form of dragnet "process, within the law, of course, "was absolutely essential," says the Attorney General, who adds: "This "involved detaining, pending investi-"gation, all such men who did not "have registration or classification "cards, which registrants are re-"quired by the regulations to keep "always in their personal posses-"sion."

Evidently there were not enough "police officials" to cast the net in New York, and hundreds (thousands, no doubt) of leaguers, soldiers and sailors, full of zeal and ginger, were assembled to make a success of the raid. It was a new experience for everybody concerned, including the suspects of and above draft age. So there were arbitrary and unnecessary "arrests." Could tact and judgment be expected of a mob of policemen, leaguers, and drafted soldiers and sailors? There was a storm of protest, and members of Congress "voiced" the public indignation. It is singular that the Department of Justice did not realize that anything illegal had been done until the tempest broke about its ears. Some one blundered. But would there have been unpleasant consequences if the auxiliaries of the "police officials" had understood that they were not to aid in making arrests?

How, it may be asked, can slacker raids be attempted in future with the dragnet? They seem to be necessary from time to time. Who is going to do the work? There are not enough "police officials." It is a problem for the President, who makes the regulations to enforce the selective service law.

POOLE STAYS.

De Witt C. Poole, Jr., our Consul General in Russia, is an American citizen to be noted and remembered. When the Americans left Moscow, Poole refused to go. He stayed there to stand by the French and British, who are in danger of their lives. These French and British seem to be largely embassy and consulate officials and employés, who have been imprisoned by order of the Terror. Among them is Consul Lockhart, who was sentenced to death by the Terror, but who was saved by the efforts of the neutral diplomats.

Poole, it is said, has now been arrested in his turn. He faced that possibility and the darker possibility back of it when he elected to stick by our allies. The Bolsheviki for a time seemed to make a distinction between America and the rest of the Allies, because of some foolish hope they entertained that they can cozen us into recognizing the Terror as a Government—a hope of which perhaps they have been disabused by the landing of American troops in the Archangel Government. It was for the purpose of demonstrating to the populace the falsity of this distinction, of showing the solidarity of the Allies, that Poole remained within the shadow of the Terror when others escaped. Whatever befalls him, Poole is an American to be proud of, and the more so as the Consular Service does not call on its members to risk their lives in their country's behalf. Poole has risked his less as an official than as an American.

We know why he has been put under arrest. The Bolsheviki are hostile to us; they are under German constraint to treat us as enemies. It is time for the United States and its partners in the war to lay aside the perfectly impossible theory that the allied forces in Siberia and in the White Sea region must make no distinctions between Russians; that we must give no encouragement to one party over any other, since that would be "interference" in domestic affairs. The Bolsheviki in Russia are our enemies precisely as the German and Austrian prisoners fighting with them are our enemies. The Bolshevist Government is hostile to us, because it is a German organization serving German interests. The day of delusion and make-believe is past. We know who our friends are in Russia; we know who our enemies are. We do untold mischief and injustice by not recognizing the difference between them.

GEORGIA AND ILLINOIS.

In their different ways the defeat of Senator Hardwick in Georgia and of William Hale Thompson as a Republican candidate for Senator from Illinois, is salutary discipline for malignants. Why any human being should be blind to the settled purpose of the American people to wage war to the uttermost against Germany puzzles the understanding. Senator Hardwick appears to be one of those parochial intelligences that, having firmly fixed themselves on the wrong side, stick to it. He was opposed to the war. He has opposed the measures for carrying it on.

The mixture of pacifism, of unconscious early acceptance of German propaganda, of bigoted anti-English prejudice in his mind, are difficult to distinguish. In a State which has the happiness of enumerating Tom Watson among its citizens, a certain belief in the efficacy of demagogy might once have been intelligible. But Senator Hardwick, to do him justice, seems to be one of those characters, "stiff in opinion, always in the wrong," who persist in their opinionativeness, and, wrapped in their conceit, are incapable of understanding the generous ardor of their fellow-citizens.

Georgia is a fine fighting State. She has been impatient with Senator Hardwick. The measure of his disaster is only partially indicated by the success of Mr. William J. Harris, the Democratic candidate. Representative Howard, who got nearly as many votes as Mr. Hardwick, and Mr. Emmet R. Shaw were also representatives of the eager loyalty of Georgia.

It is impossible to allot the part that Mr. Wilson's approval of Mr. Harris had in the result. Perhaps Southern Democrats are a little sensitive to "interference" from Washington in their politics. At any rate, resentment against it seems to have been worked up in the rural counties, and Atlanta and its county voted for Mr. Howard, who refused to withdraw to oblige the Administration.

And so Mr. Hardwick will join Mr. Vardaman in the Limbo of the Repudiated.

The case of Mr. William Hale Thompson, Mayor of Chicago, and candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator from Illinois, is at once more flagrant and more peculiar. There is something of the showman, something of the eccentric, something of the buffoon in him. But, placed in a post of responsibility, he must be held responsible. His insolence to Marshal Joffre, his abasement before the pro-German vote of "the sixth largest German city," his denunciation of conscription and proposal to keep our troops at home, his hullabaloo about a "food embargo," his coolness to the first Liberty Loan and the draft enrollment, his coddling of the People's Peace Council, are only too familiar. He made the mistake of thinking that the war would be unpopular, that the Germans, the pacifists, and the Socialists could be successfully exploited by William Hale Thompson, the modest statesman who was going to be the Republican candidate for President in 1916.

There was where "Big Bill" made his mistake. Representative McCormick has been nominated by a plurality of more than 60,000 over both Mayor Thompson and Representative Foss, a candidate as intensely loyal as Mr. McCormick. It need not give us pause that Mayor Thompson carried Chicago by 17,000. We have seen in New York, in very recent memory, the triumphant majority of mediocrity.

THE OPERA SEASON.

The announcement by General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza of the 1918-1919 program of the Metropolitan Opera Company, confirming the demonstration by last Winter's successful season of the fact that even in time of war art does not lose its spell, has a timely interest for lovers of music. The season opens on Monday evening, Nov. 11, when "Samson et Dalila" will be produced, with Caruso and Louise Homer appearing in the title rôles.

Mr. Gatti-Casazza's decision to give to American artists of promise the opportunity to prove their quality in the land of their birth is sure to appeal to Americans. Five American sopranos, two contraltos, one tenor, and one baritone will be added to the company of already renowned artists of the Metropolitan Opera Company, besides two Italian tenors, one French baritone, and one Italian baritone. Lovers of the ballet will be gratified to know that Rosina Galli, Giuseppe Bonfiglio, and Queenie Smith are again to be exponents of that art.

Two one-act operas by American composers, "The Legend," music by Joseph Charles Breil, book by Jacques Byrne, and "The Temple Dancer," music by John Adam Hugo, the libretto by Jutta Bell-Ranske, have been selected for production. Three one-act operas of Puccini are to make their world début in December: a tragedy opera, a "mystery play" and an opera buffa. Of further interest is the announcement of other novelties and revivals of operas not recently heard here.

The effort of the Metropolitan management to sustain the interest of the New York patrons of opera and to promote their enjoyment by the presentation of new artists and new operas will be appreciated in a community which never fails to reward intelligent consideration for its tastes and love of variety and novelty. To fill acceptably the very considerable void left by the exclusion of German operas from the program last Winter was a task of no small magnitude. It was performed with such success that a season of twenty-three weeks was "carried through without loss of interest on the part of the public." Whether the works of German composers have been permanently displaced from their former standing here is not a question for present decision. Many of the German operas were important, they gave pleasure to a large part of the Metropolitan audiences, and others feigned a pleasure which they may not have felt. The newer French and Italian operas may not be so structurally imposing, but they unquestionably do give pleasure to a multitude of hearers.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Americans Turned to Germans.

A correspondent of The Rochester Post Express calls its attention to the existence in its own county of Hamlin, a town largely inhabited by people who seem to be American only in their place of residence. In other respects they seem to be Germans, for though they exemplify several of the German virtues, such as sobriety, thrift, and honesty in their dealings with their neighbors, they maintain for their children a school where not only all the teaching is in the German language, but it also is in the German spirit in every respect, including that of strong opposition to everything in which Americanism differs from Teutonism.

It is natural enough, therefore, that last Winter, when a boy from this school entered a nearby district school of the ordinary character, some strange discoveries were made as to what he knew. He knew as much as any boy of his age, for he did not lack intelligence, but his information was exactly that which a German boy in Germany would have been expected to possess. About the State of New York and the United States he could tell next to nothing, but concerning Germany he had been thoroughly well taught—well taught, that is, according to the standards established by the educational authorities of Berlin.

In the opinion of The Post Express's correspondent—an opinion with which that paper cordially agrees—it is not desirable that there should be such schools as that in this country. Not only does the country itself suffer to some slight extent from the presence in it of such citizens as this school is training up, or at least trying to train up. A much more serious injury is inflicted on the boys and girls who are thus deprived of their right to become real Americans, in harmony with their neighbors. They are going to live here, not in Germany, and their short-sighted parents are deliberately making it as hard as possible for their offspring to meet and overcome the distrust which for many a year to come German blood will create for everybody in whose veins it flows.

A Colossal Truth Enunciated.

Sometimes, in the utterances of the Kaiser, there is what seems to be an element of—well, of inaccuracy. At any rate, the perfect accord with truth which is so admirable, especially in the good and great, is not always discernible by everybody in the Kaiser's public statements. On the contrary, there be those—all at a safe distance, of course—who have ventured, occasionally, to express the shocking opinion that if the Kaiser knows the truth, he is most parsimonious in divulging it, preferring to draw his facts from his imagination, and to hearten his loving subjects by presenting them with hopes as if they were realities.

But the Kaiser has just made one statement, and one about himself, too, that is of unquestionable veracity. It was while addressing the Krupp munition workers at Essen, this week, and it was when he said to them that he "had left no stone unturned to shorten the war as far as possible." With that assertion the only possible fault that could be found, even by the most captious critic, is that it was needless—that everybody in and out of Germany knows, and long has known, of the Kaiser's whole-souled efforts to make the war a short one. That purpose has had first place in his powerful and prayerful mind for at least forty years. In the effort to accomplish it he has expended with royal lavishness the resources of his country and the lives of its people, and while he has not succeeded in making the war a short one, he did his best, and, as is admitted by all, angels can do no more.

His noble intention to conquer Europe in one brief campaign has been foiled by what, in another recent speech, he called "the reprehensible methods of combat followed by the enemy." That, also, was an accurate statement. What, indeed, could have been more reprehensible than the obstinate refusal of the Allies to yield after just enough resistance to make victory glorious for their predestinate conqueror? They have fought on and on in their mad delusion that the victory should be theirs, not his, they have refused peace on the generous terms he has so often offered, and today they actually are prolonging the war by driving the Kaiser's army back mile by mile, in utter disregard of his disinclination to move in that direction. If ever there was a man with a real grievance, it is he!

A French City Under German Rule.

It was impossible to read yesterday the dispatch to The Times in which Walter Duranty recorded what the French saw and heard when they entered the town of Ham without seeing in it a particularly accurate as well as vivid picture not only of what the Germans have been and are still doing in the occupied part of France, but of the conditions in which they are themselves living and fighting.

The woman Leonie Verrier, with whom Mr. Duranty talked, spoke with a notable calmness and restraint. The sufferings of herself and the few other French residents who had remained in the city till the Germans were driven away had been cruel, indeed, but they did not lead her to exaggerate the misdeeds of the invaders with whom she had been brought in contact. They had been fairly decent, most of them—for Huns—and they had themselves undergone hardships hardly less than those of their victims. Their food had recently been scanty in amount and of miserable quality, she said—little if any better than that of the French civilians.

That is an important revelation, though not as important as it would have been had it referred to soldiers fighting at the front instead of the men, probably Landsturmers, to whom had been intrusted the holding of the town. Why there were no very serious "atrocities" at Ham is presumably because none was needed just there under the carefully regulated system by which the Germans carry out the policy of terrorization. The working of that system—the cold method of it—is well explained by Dr. Vernon Kellogg in an article contributed by him to the September Atlantic.

From a Russian Exile.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The heart of every true Russian is sad this day Petrograd in flames, assassinations, rapine, and looting rampant throughout the greatest—and most helpless—territory ever brought under a single ruler; the former Empress and her four daughters reported to have been slaughtered in cold blood; these are world events which cause every Russian loyal to Russia to hang his head in shame.

We are all sad, all humiliated by what the vile Bolsheviki have done to our country and its fair name before the world.

But on this day of evil tidings I do not envy the inmost feelings of two honorable Russians—Alexander Boublikoff, my fellow-countryman, who boasts in his comfortable exile here the "honor" of having arrested the late Czar and his family, and who left him and Russia to the fate that has befallen both, and Dimitri Apollinarovitch Semenofshi, President of the Union of the Safety of Russia, who claims a share in that dubious "honor."

How do these loyal Russians feel about Russia this day? VLADIMIR ORLOFF.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noted with interest Miss Frances Stevens's letter about Russian officers in The New York Times. Would you allow me to put in my word for the Jews, who in many ways stand in a somewhat similar position? The Jews in Russia have suffered equally with the other Russians, and in addition have been massacred in Russia as of old. Apart from this, all thinking Jews suffer now from the fake prophets who arose in their midst, and by whom for a time they were led. I mean Lenine and the Bolsheviki, whose ideas were too big for them, as they had not experience or practical ability to carry out single handed their dreams.

Greater leaders than those will arise among the Jews. Let the more fortunate races be generous while the newly freed Hebrew peoples find themselves—after over eighteen hundred years of worse treatment than the Belgians suffer today. A. D. D.

BRITISH LABOR PROGRAM.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The article by Marcus M. Marks in a recent Sunday issue presents a fair analysis in that it points out the weakness and strength of the British labor program.

Unfortunately, the weak elements so far outweigh the strong that no sane man would be willing to sanction it.

Allow me to call attention to a point in this "camouflage" which has been handled too mildly by Mr. Marks, and which demonstrates the instability of the entire structure, to use a mild term.

"The Labor Party declares emphatically against any continuance of the military service a moment longer than the imperative requirements of the war excuse." Also, "We would have all the nations of the world most solemnly undertake and promise to make common cause against any one of them that broke away from the fundamental agreement (a universal league for a supernational authority.)" It does not appear to trouble these Socialists that there must be provision for enforcing decisions of the "supernational authority." At present we have the Sheriff backed by a posse to enforce the judgment of the local court, and in times of riot and violence the Governor may call on the militia to "make common cause" against "any one that broke away."

The difficulties encountered in this antebellum regulation are too well known. The assembling of a sufficient force to discipline a nation like Germany, for instance, and the difficulties of "making cause against" it, are so flagrantly illustrated by the present war that no other illustration is needed for my argument. Without previous agreement, four years of bloodshed and destruction have so far failed.

The necessity of an army, not of hirelings, as hitherto, but of citizens enrolled for the countries' defense, has now been so forcibly demonstrated that there will be no protest except from the addle-brained pacifists and from Socialists who oppose any organization that would imperil their wanton destruction of the social structure for the purpose of propping up the "nonessential" element by exploiting the "essential," and thus closing every avenue to initiative or ambition of those whose brains and hands have since the existence of the world builded and upheld this social structure. A socialistic State will not be warranted until the Utopia of "Latter Day Warnings," by Oliver Wendell Holmes, quite appropriately printed in the same issue in which the sagacious comments of Mr. Marks appear, is established, the concluding lines of which are

> But when you see that blessed day
> Then order your ascension robes.

When the league of nations is formed, it may come to be regarded as feasible to allot to each nation a definite army and navy pro rata to its inhabitants, territory, and wealth. A definite part of this army and navy might be assigned to be sent to each of the leagued nations by the others, in order to further intimate intercourse, and act as a nucleus for assembling the necessary forces "to make common cause against any one that breaks away," in the language of the British Labor Party's report, or, in other words, to enforce the decisions of the representatives of the league on any point of dispute, if that nation displays determination to disregard this judicial behest.

With the exception of those who expect the millennium to come after the war, all thinking people will regard the abolition of military service for the defense of the land as fatal to the existence of a league of nations. S. B.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I be permitted as a citizen of the United States of many years standing, but born and reared in England, to question the possibility of generalizing on the subject of the British Tommy, as some critics still seem inclined to do? For four long years I have been receiving letters from relatives and friends who are either fighting or doing strenuous work such as we here have still to emulate. According to those who ought to know, the historic Tommy is no longer subject to rigid classification. Why should he be when one remembers that at the outbreak of the war 37,000 men of all classes, all varieties of education, volunteered every week, and that by the end of 1916 there were 5,000,000 of such volunteers—not drafted men? The attempt to classify Tommy under one head, therefore, is akin to the lapse in accuracy common to many writers of war books, who put into the mouth of every Tommy, educated or uneducated, whether from Devon or Yorkshire, the regulation cockney brogue, which is as misplaced as, or perhaps rather more so than, forcing the Highlander to talk like the Lowlander. The "Wild Cat" Division.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of Sunday, Sept. 8, containing "Who's Who in Our Army on the Western Front," I note that in both the comment preceding the personnel of organization and also in the organization itself, you refer to the 30th Division as being the "Wild Cat" Division. This is an error. The 81st Division, commanded by Major General C. J. Bailey, received its initial training at Camp Jackson, through which ran the old "Wild Cat Road," and is known as the "Wild Cat" Division. Various articles which have appeared in The Times previously contained the correct information regarding this division. The 30th Division referred to in the above article as the Wild Cat Division, and which has been operating with the British in Flanders, is known as the "Hickory Division." H. N. EDMUNDS.

THE RUSSIAN PEASANT.

A coat of skin, a home-made shoe,
Black bread to munch, a bowl to brew,
A smoky hut the stars peep through—
We brood and breed and dare not do!

To field at dawntime, cold and gray,
Be the weather what it may;
But sunset ends the master's day,
And then we drink and sing and pray.

With Winter comes the frost and snow,
When we no longer sow and mow;
Wind-driven to wild haunts we go,
Where we carouse with shame and woe.

We stand as we have always stood,
In ignorance, as peasants should;
We till another's field for food,
And clean estates for Winter wood.

Now some of us have dreamed we be
Half-wild beasts whom none dare free.
A warrior friend sends word that he

A vision bright as shooting star—
Its magic wipes out Church and Czar!
And in a night we travel far—
Prince and peasant joined in war!

Freedom flashed, a Northern Light—
Our darkest corners were made bright.
A traitor's blow with awful might—

RED CROSS ON FIRING LINE.

Davison Abroad to Confer with Those in Field, Says Statement.

"At the request of the War Council of the American Red Cross, Henry P. Davison, Chairman, has gone to Europe. The chief purpose of this, Mr. Davison's second journey to Europe within the year, is to confer with those in charge of the field of American Red Cross activities in allied countries, so that no step may be overlooked in endeavoring to meet the increasing requirements of the American Expeditionary Forces.

"Mr. Davison will report and act upon all problems of relief that confront the American Red Cross overseas. Conferences will be held with the heads of the work abroad, including Major James H. Perkins, Red Cross Commissioner to Europe; Harvey D. Gibson, Red Cross Commissioner to France; William Endicott, Red Cross Commissioner to England; Joseph P. Dimmick, Red Cross Commissioner to Switzerland, and Colonel Robert Perkins, Red Cross Commissioner to Italy.

"At the request of Mr. Davison the Goodrich Tire and Rubber Company released A. B. Jones, who will serve without pay, to take charge of the transportation department of the American Red Cross. Effectiveness of the relief work of the American Red Cross in great measure depends upon the mobility and independence of its system of transportation, and Mr. Jones will devote himself to the task of increasing its efficiency."

RABBI BRINGS IN WOUNDED.

Rev. H. G. Enelow Works as a Stretcher Bearer on Battlefield.

From preaching in Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, to acting as emergency stretcher-bearer on the battlefield is the war experience of Rabbi H. G. Enelow, a member of the field staff of the Jewish Welfare Board. In a letter to Judge George E. Samuels of Oakland, Cal., Robert Robinson, a Y. M. C. A. worker, writes as follows:

"Volunteers were called for at the Y. M. C. A. to help bring in the wounded. While tramping up to the hospital I noticed a man ahead of me in uniform and asked him to join me, which he gladly did. We went in and reported to the military authorities for work and the officer in charge set us to carrying the wounded out of the ambulances.

"We worked pretty hard and emptied seventy carloads. Both of us perspired to 'beat the band.' Then we were put to loading again after they were through the operating room, and worked till relieved by a detail of soldiers. We were mighty tired, and my friend asked me to have a soft drink with him, for it was too late to get anything to eat. While drinking a sort of soda they have here he told me he was Rabbi Enelow of Temple Emanu-El of New York. He is here on Jewish welfare work, and he says that it was a mighty good work we both did that day."

Socialist Candidate in a Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

Morris Hillquit, Socialist candidate for Congress in the Twentieth District, against whom the Democrats and Republicans have fused, is very ill at a tuberculosis sanitarium a considerable distance from New York. This statement was made at his office yesterday by his brother Jacob. Mr. Hillquit became aware that his lungs were affected something like five years ago. He gave up all professional and political activity for a time, went to Bermuda, among other places, and improved greatly.

His campaign for Mayor last Fall impaired his health again, but instead of taking a rest he turned immediately to his law practice. The condition of his lungs grew steadily worse, and his physician several days ago ordered him to give up work of every kind and go to an altitude where his lungs might heal or at least become much stronger. His brother said yesterday that it would be several weeks, at least, before Mr. Hillquit would return to town.

A MILLION DRUG FIENDS.

Investigating Committee Finds Use Rampant in the Army.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Habitual use of morphine, cocaine, heroin, and preparations containing other narcotic drugs has increased rapidly in the United States within the last two years, and a drastic anti-narcotic law must be enacted at this session of Congress to check the wholesale spread of the habit. These are the conclusions made public today by a special Treasury investigating committee, together with a partial report on the number of drug addicts actually under physicians' treatment.

The investigations of the committee, which is headed by Representative Rainey of Illinois, showed that thousands of drafted men have been dismissed from military camps after it was found that they were drug addicts, and that this number included many who systematically developed the habit after being drafted in order to insure their dismissal. This condition is one reason given for the urgency of immediate remedial legislation.

The necessary measures already have been embodied in the new Revenue bill, the committee reported, providing for registration of manufacturers and dealers in proprietary medicines containing compounds of narcotic drugs as well as the pure drug. The measure also would tax these preparations, provide means of keeping track of great quantities dispensed annually, and stop the loopholes through which thousands of violators are said to escape under the Harrison anti-narcotic act.

Hundreds of agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau, acting for the investigating committee, have reported detailed information concerning consumption of morphine, cocaine, heroin, or medicines containing similar alkaloids, and on these reports is based the estimate that at least 1,500,000 persons in the United States are drug addicts, of whom 1,000,000 are known as such in their communities, and the balance secret drug users. Full reports are expected to show 200,000 known users within the former draft ages of 21 and 31 in New York alone.

Some army officers have been found to be habitual users of morphine, and to have purchased supplies to take to France with them.

Premier von Hussarek Says Austria Will Meet "Every Defaming Catchword."

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 12.—Baron von Hussarek, the Austrian Premier, in a speech at a dinner given to a group of German journalists now visiting Austria, is quoted in a dispatch from Vienna as saying:

"Under the glorious Hapsburg sceptre for centuries Austria has become a State of strength which will enable it to meet every defaming catchword, to expel and overcome disease bearers, and to offer strong resistance to all attempts to break it up, no matter from what side they come."

Frenchwomen to Study Here.

BORDEAUX, France, Sept. 12.—One hundred women students have arrived here, preparatory to leaving for the United States. They are winners of scholarships offered by the American Government to women students of French universities to allow them to continue their studies in the United States. The Rector of Bordeaux University in an address of farewell to the students warmly praised the American Government's aid.

CALLS BURLESON ARCH POLITICIAN

MOON SCATHINGLY REPLIES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Partisan politics marked the general debate today on the $8,000,000,000 Revenue bill. The discussion took this turn with a speech by Representative Thomas W. Heflin of Alabama, replying to the recent attack on the Administration made by Representative Rodenberg of Illinois. It reached its climax with an attack on Postmaster General Burleson by Representative C. B. Miller of Minnesota, to which Representative H. A. Moon, Chairman of the Post Office Committee, replied.

Representative Miller characterized the Postmaster General as "the arch politician of the times," pronounced the postal service "inefficient and deplorable," and asserted that Mr. Burleson was an enemy of labor unions and employed convict labor on his farm in Texas.

"Criticism of a public official, especially at this time," said Mr. Miller, "is justified only when the public welfare requires it. The condition to which our postal service has been brought by the unrelenting and oppressive hand of Albert S. Burleson has become a menace to the nation's business, and such a menace, grave in character and nation-wide in influence, demands immediate attention.

"The mail system, which serves every business, every home, every soldier at the front, has steadily declined in efficiency, and further demoralization is in prospect. It is an everyday occurrence for letters posted never to be heard of again.

"Tyrannical, Brutal Treatment."

"Investigation discloses that this demoralization results from a tyrannical, even brutal, treatment of the hundred thousand postal employes by the Postmaster General, and from certain policies that seem to ignore all consideration of efficiency."

Mr. Miller said that when Mr. Burleson was appointed Postmaster General, partisan management of the postal service was expected, and no one was disappointed.

"He can see no proposition except in a bitterly partisan way," he added. "The Civil Service Commission has been made an agency of the Postmaster General, its freedom destroyed, and its capacity to act justly and fairly taken away. Let no one be deceived by the announced policy of the President that certain classes of Postmasters are to be selected under the civil service. The President may have proposed, but Burleson has disposed. His rules omit all reappointments from the civil service test. All Democratic Postmasters could be sure of holding their jobs so long as they didn't steal or die.

"Apparently to see workers well paid, contented, and in high spirits, doing their best, drove him to frenzy. That sight he does not propose to see if he can help it. There is no length he will not go to prevent it."

Mr. Miller charged that the Postmaster General had set at naught a law passed by Congress giving an increase in salary to postal employes, said that repressive measures of all kinds had been put into effect, that he had ruthlessly discharged civil war veterans from postal jobs, and had forced employes to "reflect the Burleson mind."

In conclusion Mr. Miller referred to the large land holdings of Mr. Burleson in Texas, said that convicts were employed there, and ended with the sentence:

"Hell can have no terrors for convicts that toiled and suffered on the Burleson farm."

"A Political Coward."

"An attack of this kind is the inevitable result of low breeding and a low order of the commonest kind of mind," said Mr. Moon. "With the complacency of a political coward, he comes here and makes false charges against a public official. I cannot call them charges, they are mere slanders.

"I do not think that he does his country any good or his party any good by such utterances. It is almost next to treason for any man in this body or anywhere else to bring into ridicule or contempt a high official of this Government, a member of the President's Cabinet. Of course I was not surprised at a speech of this kind on the part of the gentleman from Minnesota.

"Mr. Burleson is able to defend himself. If the gentleman will go to Mr. Burleson and face to face repeat these charges instead of standing here like a coward and making them, the Postmaster General will give him that which is demanded by an attack of this kind."

Representative Focht of Pennsylvania called upon Mr. Moon to explain why it is that the postal service to soldiers abroad was so notoriously bad.

"I take it that this question is asked in good faith, and not inspired by the same kind of spirit that animates the venomous gentleman from Minnesota," said Mr. Moon, "and in answer I will say that it is due to the fact that the Post Office Department cannot follow the mails to their final destination when they get on the other side."

Mr. Moon explained that the military authorities handled the mails after they were landed abroad, and he could not explain delays there.

"I want to say that I think it is due to the rankest inefficiency of the Post Office Department," said Mr. Focht. "Their employes have the hardest work with the poorest pay in Government service."

Representative Meyer London, Socialist, of New York, closed the political speech-making by denouncing both Republicans and Democrats for indulging in politics at this time. Said Mr. London:

"Imagine the soldier in the trenches reading the cheap, vulgar, partisan nonsense we have heard today. It's all camouflage. It's a cheap political game on both sides, trying to get control of the House and trying to catch votes."

LAUNCH 2 MORE STEEL SHIPS

Submarine Boat Corporation Is Putting Out Two Every Week.

Two more steel ships of 5,500 tons capacity were launched yesterday at the shipyards of the Submarine Boat Corporation, Port Newark Terminal, the yard living up to its promise of two a week and maintaining its record as the pacemaker of the Atlantic Coast yards. The two vessels that slid down the ways yesterday were named the Monana and the Charloe, respectively, the sponsors being Mrs. Charles Goodhand and Mrs. Edgar Crist, wives of the way Superintendents who supervised the construction.

Workers on both ships, officials of the yard and a few friends witnessed the launchings, which went off on time and without mishap. Most of the workmen in the yard, having become accustomed to the splashing of newly built ships into Newark Bay, continued their work on the other ways with scarcely a glance toward the new links in the bridge of ships. President Henry R. Carse presented each of the sponsors with gold watches. The workers on the Charloe gave Mrs. Crist an ultramarine lavalliere.

SEIZE MARINE PLANT IN VIRGIN ISLANDS

FIT FOR GUN EMPLACEMENTS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—A potential German naval base in the Virgin Islands has been seized by the Alien Property Custodian and will be used for the needs of the American Navy and Customs Department. The base consists of land, buildings, docks, warehouses, large water tanks and cisterns, lighters, loading paraphernalia, and coaling facilities formerly owned by the Hamburg-American Line.

In announcing seizure of the marine plant, which is at St. Thomas, Alien Property Custodian Palmer said that Germany considered that it admitted of possibilities as a naval base, "as shown by the fact that their principal building commanding the harbor is of reinforced concrete and the plaza in front of it is said to have an eight-foot foundation of concrete, fit for gun emplacements."

After the United States acquired the Islands from Denmark, and when it appeared that it would declare war on Germany, Mr. Palmer said, the Hamburg-American Line agent, who also was the German Consul, "sold" the plant to the line's lawyer, a Danish citizen named Jorgensen. The sole consideration mentioned was a note for $210,000, which Jorgensen was said to have given to the German company. This note was payable three months after date, renewable every three months until after the war, and bore no interest, Mr. Palmer said.

Darwin O. Curry, the Alien Property Custodian's representative at St. Thomas, learned of the transaction, and Jorgensen finally executed a deed to the Alien Property Custodian, but not, Mr. Palmer said, until after he had protested and sought refuge in his Danish citizenship. The Alien Property Custodian assumed whatever obligations were attached to the note Jorgensen had given to the German company, and the note itself was seized.

One of the reasons for the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States was the fact that St. Thomas offered a natural base for the defense of the Panama Canal. It is the intention of the Government to fortify the harbor and establish a naval station there.

A. W. DIMOCK DEAD; FINANCIER-AUTHOR

Anthony Weston Dimock, for many years well known in New York City as financier, explorer, steamship owner, and author, died suddenly at his country home in Happy Valley, Catskill Mountains, near the village of Peekamose, Ulster County. He was widely known because of the diversified occupations, and because of the genius and ability he displayed in each.

Mr. Dimock was born in Yarmouth, N. S., Aug. 27, 1842. He was graduated from Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., in 1859, and in 1872 received the A. M. degree from Columbian University, now the George Washington University. He came to New York and began his business career, being accepted as a member of the Stock Exchange before he was 21 years old. He dominated the gold market of the country at the age of 23, and at 30 he controlled the Bankers and Merchants Telegraph Company, and was president of the Atlantic Mail and other steamship lines. He was first a member of the firm of Marquand & Dimock, bankers and brokers, and later A. W. Dimock & Co.

At the height of his career he left New York City to seek adventure among the Indians and ranchers of the West. When he returned East a few years later he took a prominent part in the development of Elizabeth, N. J., building miles of streets and several hundred dwellings, costing from $5,000 to $150,000 each. A gymnasium and other public buildings were constructed by him. He then went to the Palisades on the Hudson, where he spent a quarter of a million in the beautifying of his estate, upon which he built a palatial residence. After living there for several years he went to Happy Valley, which he discovered and made famous, and where he remained the rest of his life.

He was a member of the Authors' League of America and of the Authors' Club of New York, and the Camp Fire of America. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Helen Weston of Elizabeth, N. J., and they were married in 1865. She died in 1901 and in 1909 he married Miss Lelia B. Allen, also of Elizabeth, N. J.

JOS. C. S. BLACKBURN, EX-SENATOR, IS DEAD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Joseph C. S. Blackburn, former Senator from Kentucky and in recent years a Resident Commissioner of the Lincoln Memorial Commission, died early today at his home here. He was stricken shortly after arising with a recurrence of heart attacks from which he was a chronic sufferer.

Joseph C. S. Blackburn was born Oct. 1, 1838, in Woodford County, Ky., but upon graduating from Center College he moved to Chicago, where he practiced law for two years. In 1861 he espoused the Confederate cause, and after serving for three years as aid de camp to General Preston he received an independent command in Mississippi. At the close of the war he returned to Kentucky as a lawyer and planter. In 1871 he was elected a member of the House of Representatives at Washington and remained a member of that body for eleven years, presiding as Speaker pro tem. over the greater part of the sessions of the Forty-fourth Congress. He was a delegate to the National Democratic Conventions from 1880 to 1904, and in 1896 his name was presented to the convention as Kentucky's choice for President, but William J. Bryan was nominated.

Senator Blackburn was a member of the United States Senate for three administrations and was Chairman of the Senate Democratic caucus in 1906. He represented Kentucky in the Senate from 1885 to 1897 and again from 1901 to 1907. As one of the leaders of the free silver wing of the Democratic Party he took a conspicuous part in the memorable fight for free silver in the National Democratic Convention in 1896.

After his retirement from the Senate President Roosevelt appointed him a member of the reorganized Isthmian Canal Commission and Civil Governor of the Canal Zone, a position embracing the administration of courts, schools, public works, and all civil organizations. He resigned in 1909 and returned to his home in Kentucky. Congress passed a joint resolution in 1914 making him special Resident Commissioner of the board charged with the erection of the national memorial to Abraham Lincoln in Washington, and a year later he laid the cornerstone of this monument.

DOUGLAS ROBINSON DIES SUDDENLY AT 63

NOTED AS REALTY OPERATOR

Father of State Senator Was Partner of W. H. Wheelock, in Charge of Government Real Estate.

Douglas Robinson, capitalist and real estate dealer, brother-in-law of Theodore Roosevelt and father of State Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, died at 12:10 o'clock yesterday afternoon from heart disease in a hospital at Amsterdam, N. Y., where he was taken Wednesday night when he became suddenly ill on a New York Central train while on his way to his country home in Jordanville, Herkimer County. Mrs. Robinson was with him when the end came. He was in his sixty-fourth year.

Mr. Robinson was widely known in New York State, and for a number of years was one of the leading figures in New York City realty transactions. He was President of the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company and the Douglas Land Company, trustee of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Company, Director of the Equitable Life Assurance Society and the Astor Trust Company.

Because of the demands made upon the man power in the companies in which he was interested, Mr. Robinson was making preparations to take on more of the duties and responsibilities of his business enterprises than he had assumed in a number of years. William H. Wheelock, Vice President of the Douglas Robinson Company, has been selected by the Government to establish a real estate department, and this fact had led to the decision by Mr. Robinson to personally take over more of the work of the company, believing that in this way he would be giving some aid in the winning of the war. He expected to take over for the period of the war the real estate business of all firms with which he was connected that would otherwise have to close because of their members entering the service.

Mr. Robinson was one of the receivers of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company in 1908. He had many business connections in the city, but he devoted his time mainly to real estate operations. It was charged and used in the campaign against his brother-in-law, Theodore Roosevelt, that he had profited by the Panama Canal purchase. The charge was vehemently denied by all concerned.

Mr. Robinson, accompanied by his wife, was received by the Japanese Emperor on May 5, 1910, and he was received by the Italian King in March, 1907. It was on the trip to Italy in 1907 that Mr. and Mrs. Robinson visited the Pope, from which sprang report that a Catholic prelate had tried to make capital out of it to advance the interests of Archbishop Ireland for the Cardinalate. Mrs. Robinson denied on her return that Bishop Ireland's name had been mentioned, and also denied any mention of politics with the Pope. The incident attracted nation-wide interest at the time, as Roosevelt was then President.

Mr. Robinson was graduated from Oxford in the class of 1876 and married Miss Corinne Roosevelt, sister of Theodore Roosevelt, who survives him, as do also three children, Theodore Douglas Robinson, formerly State Senator, who is now an officer in the training camp at Louisville, Ky.; Captain Monroe Douglas Robinson, now in command of Company B, 307th Communication Train, 37th Division, American Expeditionary Forces, now in France, and Mrs. Joseph Wright Alsop, wife of Senator Joseph Alsop, now a member of the Connecticut State Council of Defense.

Mr. Robinson was a member of the University, Riding, Downtown, and Essex County Country Clubs. His city residence was at 9 East Sixty-third Street. The funeral will take place at his country home, Henderson House.

AGED GOLFER IN TIE FOR BEST NET SCORE

HASSE HAS BEST ROUND

Six veterans, one past the three-score and ten mark, tied for the best net at the end of the first eighteen-hole round of the second half of the Seniors' Golf Association tournament at Apawamis yesterday. The leading sextette were Col. Brent Arnold, Cincinnati, one of the oldest men in the tournament; J. William Smith of Bellevue; Addison B. Colvin, Glens Falls; Charles Cooper of Garden City; Capt. S. H. Heap, Philadelphia, and George D. Munson of New Haven all returning 77.

In the competition for gross score honors, E. J. Hasse of the Philadelphia Cricket Club led with a round of 88. By comparison with the 82 made by W. E. Truesdell on Tuesday, Hasse's score looks rather high, though it was only two strokes more than the 86 returned by Col. J. E. Smith, the leader on Wednesday.

The selected score winners for the first two days are as follows: Class A, G. P. Hart, 82 gross, J. R. Marshall, 67 net; Class B, J. C. Head, 82 gross, Dr. D. R. Robertson, 68 net; Class C, W. O. Henderson, 83 gross, J. H. Duffy, 70 net; and Class D, W. T. Dunmore and A. S. Nichols tied at [illegible] gross, while A. S. Worthington won the net prize with 67.

The veterans on this side of the border will be represented in a team match with the Canadian Seniors' Golf Association at the Royal Montreal Golf Club on Wednesday next. At the annual meeting held at the clubhouse Wednesday night the challenge from the Canadian golfers was read, and a motion of acceptance was made. Frank Presbrey was appointed Captain, and he is to round up a team to go to Montreal. The competition will be for a cup presented by the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada.

Walter Brown of Montclair, the Treasurer, was the only official to resign his duties, the others being elected for another year, as follows: Horace L. Hotchkiss, Honorary President; Darwin P. Kingsley, President; Justice Mahlon Pitney, First Vice President; Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, Second Vice President; J. A. Flynn, Treasurer, and W. H. Hale, Secretary. The Tournament Committee, consisting of Frederick J. Wessels, Chairman; Dwight L. Elmendorf and Winthrop Sargent, will serve for another year, and the eight Directors, whose terms had expired, were reappointed for a period of three years. They are as follows: T. B. Boyd, W. O. ROSS HORSES WIN BRACKETS

Two Lead in Races Over Havre de Grace Track.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., Sept. 12.—Commander J. K. L. Ross's horses were in good form at the races today, his recently acquired Dottie Vandiver capturing the Mermaid purse for two-year-olds, while the following event for three-year-olds was won by Foreground. The victory of Dottie Vandiver was mildly surprising, as among the also rans was J. H. Rosseter's Passing Shower, a stake winner at Saratoga and a greatly fancied candidate for the Mermaid. The failure of Passing Shower allowed two outsiders, Duchess Lace and Ambassador III., to get in the money.

TROEH TAKES TRAP TITLE.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 12.—F. M. Troeh of Vancouver, Wash., smashing 100 targets without miss, won the Westy Hogan Amateur Championship today in the second day's shoot of the twelfth trap tourney of the Westy Hogans at the aviation grounds. G. N. Fish of New York and Charles Newcomb of Philadelphia tied for second, and in the shoot-off Fish was the victor, running twenty straight. Newcomb missed his third bird.

In Class B, G. S. Becker, Pennsylvania, was high man with 150 breaks. W. B. Severn, also of Pennsylvania, was second with 149.

The East gained 14 points over the Western team, clinching further its hold on the intersectional honors, acquiring a total of 1,524. The Westerners have a total of 1,500. The five high men from the team of ten representing the two districts were:

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—Members of the Boston American League baseball team, winners of the 1918 world's championship, received $20,837.45 today as their share of the gate receipts from the world's series. Manager Edward Barrow and the fourteen Boston regulars each received $1,108.45 while Infielder Fred Thomas, who obtained a furlough from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station to play for the Red Sox, was voted $750. Various sums went to other players now in war service, the trainers, ground keepers, and others.

The check did not include ten per cent., which it had been voted to donate to charitable organizations, and the players instructed Captain Harry Hooper to obtain the amount from the commission and distribute it among Boston war charities.

GRIMES IS ORDERED WEST.

It generally was believed that the Brooklyn Navy Yard intended to pitch Burleigh Grimes, the sensational twirler of the Brooklyn Superbas, in the Army-Navy game at the Polo Grounds tomorrow. Grimes won't be on hand, as he has just been ordered to the Great Lakes Training Camp and is now on his way West. Instead of Grimes the Navy hopes to play Jeff Pfeffer, who has just been ordered to the Officers' Training Camp at Pelham Bay.

Former Heroes of Cinder Path to Compete in Nationals.

Three more of the nation's army training camps have notified Amateur Athletic Union officials that they will have representation in the annual track and field championships at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Sept. 20, 21, and 23. They are Camp Fremont, California; Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., and Kelly Field, San Antonio, Texas.

Lieutenant Alma Richards, Olympic high jump champion, will head the team from Camp Fremont, which will include six of Uncle Sam's fighters. Edward Beeson, a former member of the Olympic Club, who holds the outdoor high jump record of 6 feet 7 5-16 inches, will be another member of the team.

Yearlings Bring Low Prices.

Yearling thoroughbreds from the Keeneland and Bashford studs were sold at auction last night at Durland's. The prices were generally small, the highest sum, $850, being paid by Fred Burlew for a brown colt by Luke McLuke-Micaela.

PEN ROSE CREDITED WITH RECORD TIME

Fleet Filly Runs Five Furlongs in 0:55 3-5, According to Belmont Park Officials.

Many astonishing things happened at Belmont Park races yesterday, not the least startling being the hanging out of 0:55 3-5 as the time for five-furlongs when the Triple Springs Farm's speedy Pen Rose defeated Harry Payne Whitney's Pigeon Wing in the opening dash. This mark will in all probability take a place among the records, but like several other performances on the books it will be doubted by conservative sportsmen. Many trainers and other clockers timed the race, and not one of these could be found who made the figures faster than 0:58 2-5, while most of the watches showed a fifth of a second slower.

It is true there was a stiff breeze favoring the runners, but even under these conditions the time is remarkable, as three others in the field finished within three lengths of the winner. Thus every one of the leading quartet would have broken the track mark of 0:57 1-5 made by Pen Rose in the Spring as well as the American record of 0:56¾ made by Maid Marian at Morris Park in 1894. Pen Rose's time, if correct, also equals the world's record made on the exceedingly fast turf at Epsom Downs.

The presence of St. Isidore in the Nassau Selling Stakes at a mile was sufficient to cause the scratching of five of the overnight entries, leaving only Whimsy as the contender in the feature event. St. Isidore won as a 7 to 20 favorite should, and this was the only time during the day that the talent managed to select a winner.

With the stake feature a dead letter the all-aged handicap at seven furlongs provided the best contest and also the greatest surprise, brought about by rough riding on the part of Jockey Rice that earned him a suspension for the remaining two days of the meeting. A. K. Macomber's Star Master, with Loftus in the saddle, was the good thing which was backed down from 7 to 5 to 7 to 10.

Loftus was following the pace set by Tom McTaggart until nearing the stretch, where he elected to take a course to the outside of Tom McTaggart. Rice steered over Tom McTaggart when Star Master tried to go by and kept on with these tactics all the way through the stretch until he had forced Loftus's mount almost to the outside rail. Lyke took advantage of this with Sun Flash II., and creeping up close to the rail managed to beat the favorite by a neck. Tom McTaggart's number was taken down after he had finished third and that position awarded to the 40 to 1 shot, Valor. At the start of this race Red Sox stumbled and threw Jockey Apel, but the boy was not injured.

The steeplechase was won in a gallop by Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords's Babcock, with J. E. Widener's Expectation, an equal choice with H. L. Pratt's Nutmeg, second. Babcock's path to victory was made easier when Nutmeg unshipped his rider at the second jump on the back field, an accident that resulted in a broken collar bone for H. Crawford.

NEW OFFICIALS FOR A. A. U.

Obertubbesing Refuses to Serve Further as Secretary.

Several new officials of the Metropolitan A. A. U. are to be named at the annual meeting Monday night at the Glencoe A. C. of Harlem. The important changes will be in the Secretary-Treasurer's office and on the registration committee. It developed yesterday that Herman Obertubbesing, for seventeen years identified with local athletics, has declined to accept renomination. Obertubbesing was elected at last year's meeting, after having been handicapper for the local district for seven years. Previously he had served as Secretary-Treasurer for ten years. The retiring incumbent declares business conditions compe l his action.

J. McInerney of the St. Anselm's A. C., a member of the registration committee, has been nominated to replace Obertubbesing as Secretary-Treasurer. Another aspirant for the office is Charles Elbert of the Anchor A. C. of Jersey City, a former member of the registration committee.

In scouting around for officials to fill vacancies on the registration committee, considerable difficulty has been experienced. Two old members of the committee still remain, in Fred A. Niles, Jr., Chairman, and Martin Klein. Adolph Arnold, Pastime A. C., was selected to succeed McInerney, but declined, and Ben Levy, Glencoe A. C., also declined a berth on the committee. Alex Aro, Brooklyn A. A., has accepted the nomination, with Tim Sullivan, Mohawk A. C., and Ben Owens of Newark.

COLLEGES MAY DROP FOOTBALL AS SPORT

Suspension of All Schedules Requested as War Measure by Washington.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—The possibility of the complete suspension of football in all important colleges and universities in the country as a war measure, loomed up strongly tonight as a result of the War Department's request that no Fall gridiron schedules be arranged by educational institutions having student army training corps. There are 400 universities and colleges scattered through the country with student corps.

All of the big universities in the Middle West had already made plans for carrying out the 1918 schedules, and the request for the abandonment of the intercollegiate sport came as a distinct surprise. Practice was to have started in the "big ten" conference next Monday, and similar plans for the practice season were under way in the Missouri valley conference. Extensive schedules had been arranged by every important institution, many of the games being scheduled with service elevens.

Officials of the University of Chicago said the War Department's request undoubtedly means that all spare time of the students will be devoted to military instruction instead of athletics, and that there would be no time for the development of football.

"Every able-bodied student will be enrolled in the military unit and will live exactly under training camp conditions, devoting fourteen hours weekly to military drill and forty-two hours weekly to academic studies on military problems," said David A. Robertson, secretary to President Judson of the University of Chicago. "Under that program there will be no time for football. It would be impossible to spare the time to train men for the game.

"The great need, of course, is the development of officers for the army, and if football must be given up there will be no other course to pursue."

A. A. Stagg, the veteran coach at the University of Chicago, was surprised at the request, as he understood that the military program would not interfere with the game. He pointed to the fact that in the development of football at West Point the players devoted less than an hour a day to practice, and that he would attempt to build a team under the same circumstances.

Stagg said: "I can see no reason for the suspension of the sport. Football undoubtedly would make better officers. Every member of the 1915 University of Minnesota eleven, both regular and substitute, is an officer in the army and they are giving a good account of themselves in France. Former stars of Chicago's football field also are making good as officers."

The abandonment of the game will result in heavy financial losses, as the proceeds of the sport usually net the deficit in baseball and other college games.

FEW SCHEDULES ARRANGED.

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—Suspension of collegiate football as a war measure, as requested today by the War Department, will not upset any plans made by Eastern universities and colleges. Only Brown, Dartmouth, Colgate, and the University of Pennsylvania have drawn up tentative schedules, and, so far as known here, no plans for practice are under way. Williams, Fordham, and all the Maine colleges already have announced abandonment of the sport for this season and probably for the duration of the war. Princeton and Georgetown have planned to put only freshmen teams in the field.

Football plans at Harvard, Yale, and other institutions have been held in abeyance pending the opening of the colleges. The cancellation of the Fordham schedule came largely as a result of the decision of many Southern colleges to give up football.

PENN HOPES FOR A TEAM.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—Up to tonight the University of Pennsylvania has not been advised by the War Department to suspend plans for football this Fall. At a meeting of the University Council on Athletics today, Major Charles G. Griffith, Commandant of the Students' Army Training Corps at the university, explained that he desired to encourage athletic competition so long as it did not interfere with the intensive training schedule outlined for the members of the corps.

Athletic competition, it was announced by the Council, would depend upon the time left for such activities by the course of military training which begins at the university Oct. 1.

Preliminary football practice, scheduled to start Sept. 16 has been postponed pending a determination of the final policy with regard to this sport.

SECURITY LEAGUE REBUKED BY CREEL

ACCUSES PROF. VAN TYNE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, today wrote and made public a letter to the National Security League, protesting against the "singular dishonesty and indecency" of the publicity that has attended the suppression of the book "Two Thousand Questions and Answers About the War."

The book, for which Mr. Creel wrote a foreword, was withdrawn after it had been discovered that it contained a considerable amount of matter favorable to Germany. Dr. Claude H. Van Tyne of the Department of History of the University of Michigan, who is now serving as Educational Director of the National Security League's Bureau of Education, after going through the book, reported that it was, in his opinion, a masterpiece of German propaganda.

"The German Government," Dr. Van Tyne reported, "could not have devised anything more insidious, more calculated to destroy our faith in our allies, and to insinuate into the American mind excuses for Germany. Indorsed by the Chairman of the Committee on Public Information it becomes a menace to American morale."

Mr. Creel's letter to the league follows:

Committee on Public Information.

Dear Sir: Certain New York papers, under date of Sept. 12, carry articles to the effect that the National Security League has forced the suppression of a book, entitled "Two Thousand Questions and Answers About the War," with a foreword by me, the plain inference being drawn that this "masterpiece of Hun propaganda," as your organization styles it, was being freely circulated without criticism of any kind until your own investigators took patriotic action.

I cannot forego a public protest against the sigular dishonesty and even indecency of this publicity. The book, instead of being without responsible authorship, bore the imprint of the Review of Reviews, and as far back as June 26 I wrote the following letter to Dr. Albert Shaw:

My Dear Mr. Shaw: While it is true that I glanced through the proofs of "Two Thousand Questions and Answers About the War" before I wrote my foreword, it is equally true that I relied less upon my hasty reading than upon my absolute faith in you.

The last week or so I have made a more careful study of the book, and I must confess to a very definite disturbance of mind. The whole tone of the book strikes me as being 50-50, for nowhere in it can I find the fundamental truth that Germany was entirely responsible for this war and that it is a war of self-defense upon the part of the liberal nations of the world. In connection with atrocities, deportations, hostages, use of gas, I am also unable to find anything that is in the nature of a straight-out condemnation of the Germans.

I feel sure that you yourself could not have had much to do with the book, or else the articles would have had a more intense Americanism and less of the evasive straddling note. If there is a second edition, I do wish that you would take the whole matter up with me, so that this very valuable contribution to war can be given greater effectiveness. Sincerely,
GEORGE CREEL, Chairman.

This letter was followed at once by seven single-spaced typewritten pages, pointing out specific objections. Dr. Shaw replied at once, promising instant correction and fullest revision. He also stated that the book was based upon the accumulation of material secured in advance sheets from the well-known British journalist, the son of the late William T. Stead, and because of its source the editors had not given it the necessary searching scrutiny.

I then took up the matter with Mr. George H. Doran, the publisher, who, with his usual eager patriotism, agreed that the sale of the book should be stopped until its contents were satisfactory to me. Because there was not the slightest evidence of any premeditated pro-Germanism in the matter, because the good faith and true Americanism of all the parties in the controversy were so obvious, and because the book itself had been stopped, and a new edition under way, I avoided all publicity in the matter out of my desire to work no injustice to any one.

All these facts were laid before Professor Van Tyne of your organization. By his careful suppression of them in the story that he gave to the press, I am led to believe that his sense of honor is somewhat subordinated to his weakness for a little cheap notoriety. Very truly,
GEORGE CREEL, Chairman.

TELLS WHY MAGAZINE WITHDREW WAR BOOK

Spokesman of Review of Reviews Charges Garbling in the Security League's Attack.

The Review of Reviews has locked horns with the National Security League in the matter of the league's alleged putting out of circulation entitled "Two ting out of circulation a book entitled "Two Thousand Questions and Answers About the War." The book was published recently for The Review of Reviews by the George H. Doran Company, and contained an introduction by George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information. The National Security League asserts that it caused the Doran Company to withdraw it from circulation because it contained insidious German propaganda. The Review of Reviews, through the treasurer of its company, Charles D. Lanier, alleges that it withdrew the book from circulation two months before the National Security League criticised it. Furthermore, Mr. Lanier alleges that the quotations made from the volume by the league were garbled.

"In the bulletin sent out by the National Security League," Mr. Lanier declared yesterday, "picking out from the book and quoting questions and answers to show their offensive character, their editor has utterly garbled and distorted the actual answers printed in the book by the consistent omission of essential portions, and has even gone so far as to falsify the quotation and to give an answer entirely different from that printed in the book."

Mr. Lanier issued a formal statement which read:

"The book '2,000 Questions and Answers About the War' was withdrawn from print two months ago, and two months before any criticism came from the National Security League. The following are the essential facts concerning its origin and publication.

"For more than three years there has been published in each issue of the Australian periodical Stead's Review a chapter of concise questions and answers about details of the war, chiefly the new mechanical inventions, submarines, airplanes, torpedoes, depth charges, trench weapons and tactics, under the title 'A Catechism of the War.' Now and then, these were varied with questions involving the history and politics of the war and the warring countries.

"Last year we planned to issue a volume of this nature to include most of those questions and answers printed in the Australian 'Catechism' and many others added by our editors as more interesting to American readers. We issued the volume last Spring, Mr. George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, furnishing the introduction.

Creel Made Complaint.

"Some time after publication, Mr. Creel wrote to us that there were a number of questions and answers in the book that were objectionable and pointed out examples. We replied immediately that the first small edition was exhausted and that no more would be printed unless and until the volume was made by re-writing and revision absolutely acceptable in every detail to Mr. Creel and his associates. No more were printed and many hundreds of people who ordered the book have been kept waiting two months for the revised edition.

"On investigation of the objectionable passages, of which there were a number, it was found that practically all of them were from the pen of the British journalist who had constructed the 'Catechism of the War,' they having been passed by the censor and published in Australia; and that it was this knowledge of the origin of the paragraphs and a consequent assumption of their propriety that had led to laxity in the sub-editing of those portions of our volume.

"To insure the correct re-writing and revision of the volume, we at once obtained from the Committee on Public Information itself the names of certain American college professors who could safely be intrusted with the superintendence of the re-editing. Under one of these the revisions has proceeded during the past months, and not a copy will be printed until the result of this work has been accepted by the Committee on Public Information as a whole and in detail.

"A statement embodying these facts was sent to the National Security League, at their request, on Sept. 9. Their Publicity Director promised to publish our statement if and when they published any criticism of the book. So far as we can learn, however, they have not in any case included our statement of the facts."

Lanier Charges Omissions.

Here are two questions and answers which Mr. Lanier said last evening at his home in Greenwich, Conn., had been misquoted or garbled:

P. 24. Q.—How would the people of Alsace-Lorraine vote in a plebiscite? A.—The Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1910, eleventh edition, Cambridge, England, leans to the opinion that they would wish to remain German, * * * Sir Harry H. Johnston, the well-known British Colonial official, wrote in the English Nineteenth Century Magazine: "If a plebiscite were called, absolutely uncontrolled by Government officials, it would probably be found that there was an overwhelming majority of votes in * * * Alsace-Lorraine for inclusion within the German Empire."

Q.—Has war ever produced so much hatred as this one? A.—Always much the same kind of attacks as now on the Germans.

In the Alsace-Lorraine answer, Mr. Lanier said that, following the citations from the Encyclopaedia Britannica and from Sir Harry H. Johnston, another authority was cited who expressed the opinion that, in a plebiscite, the "Lost Provinces" undoubtedly would vote to return to France. In the war hate answer, Mr. Lanier said, four lines from Thackeray, which were not pro-German, were omitted. He added that there were many other similar cases, but that he would not attempt to specify them without being able to refer to the book.

Some of the other objectionable questions and answers in the book, according to the National Security League, were:

P. 36. Q.—Did Germany offer indemnity for Americans lost on the Lusitania? A.—Yes, while negotiations over the Lusitania case were still pending she stated her willingness to pay indemnity for the deaths of Americans.

Q.—How did Prussia become militaristic? A.—As a result of being licked too often. * * * Whenever France wanted to fight Russia or Austria the road led through Wuerttemberg, Bavaria, or Prussia, * * * At last the Prussians determined grimly to fight for themselves, and it was under the inspiration of a burning zeal and love for home and country that the seeds of militarism were sown.

P. 215. Q.—What is the German people's attitude toward the Kaiser? A.—With the exception of the most radical Socialists, the German people hold the Kaiser in the highest esteem.

P. 1. Q.—Do the best-informed students of world politics feel that the war could have been avoided? A.—The war at first appeared to be the result of Germany's determination to grasp and make secure her "place in the sun" along lines quite similar to those upon which in the past had been built the British Empire, the French Colonial Empire, and the tremendous Russian expansion.

P. 2. Q.—What were the great specific pre-war rivalries? A. (3)—British control of the world sea, which bound a huge part of the world together as "The British Empire." (The all red belt around the earth, as shown on British postage stamps) and the consequent control of nearly the whole colonial area of earth.

Copies of the book are very difficult to obtain. There were none to be had from the publishers or from the bookshops, it was said last night, and F. W. Stone of The Review of Reviews Company said there was not a copy in the company's possession.

The National Security League, through its publicity agent, E. L. Harvey, said, when asked why the explanation of The Review of Reviews had not appeared at the same time with the attack on the book, that it was not the business of the league to defend the magazine or its publishers. If they had any defense, he added, they could make it themselves.

OFFERS $600,000,000 MORE CERTIFICATES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Secretary McAdoo today authorized the offer at par and accrued interest of $600,000,000 or more Treasury certificates of indebtedness, bearing interest at 4½ per cent. per annum from Sept. 17, 1918, payable Jan. 16, 1919. This offer is the sixth of a bi-weekly series. Applications will be received at the Federal Reserve Banks and subscription books will close Sept. 24. Denominations will be $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, and -100,000.

The announcement gives the customary conditions under which the certificates of the series are issued. Upon ten days' public notice, given in such manner as may be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, the certificates may be redeemed as a whole at par and accrued interest on or after any date, occurring before the maturity of certificates, set for the payment of the first installment of the subscription price of any bonds offered for subscription by the United States after the offering and before the maturity of such certificates. The certificates of this series, whether or not called for redemption, will be accepted at par, with adjustment of accrued interest, if tendered on such installment date in payment on the subscription then payable of any such bonds subscribed for and allotted to holders of such certificates.

Do They Save Money or Not?

Critics of special sales of one kind or another base their contentions against the holding of them in wartime on the ground that they tempt consumers to spend money for things they do not really need at a time when the Government is in need of considerable funds. Against this, however, is the argument of the dealers that not only are special sales guiltless of this charge, but they enable the public to buy things that are really needed at prices much below the levels that would ordinarily have to be paid for the same goods. This, it is contended, leaves the way open for consumers to invest the difference between the "regular" and "mark down" price in Government securities.

REVEALS GERMAN CRUELTY TO BLACKS

INDICTS GERMAN FITNESS

LONDON, Sept. 12.—A report containing evidences of the brutal methods employed by Germany in the administration of her colonies in Africa, made public today by Edmond H. L. Georges, Acting Secretary of the Interior for the Union of South Africa, constitutes the British Government's reply to Dr. W. S. Solf, the German Secretary of State for the Colonies, that Germany would demand the return of her colonies at the peace conference.

The report, which is regarded as one of the most sensational ever issued in connection with German colonial methods, is an indictment of German fitness to rule the black native of Africa.

The facts upon which the report is based are taken from official German documents at Windhoek, sworn statements by native chiefs and by Europeans familiar with the country, and the writings of Governor Leutwein, who held office from 1894 to 1905; Dr. Paul Rohrbach, Dr. Karl Dove, and others.

Altogether the report contradicts in detail Dr. Solf's recent assertion that "Germany's pre-war humane treatment of the native races won for her the moral right to be a great colonial power." Regarding this assertion this statement is made by Acting Secretary Georges:

"The native opinion here is unanimously against any idea of their ever being handed back to the tender mercies of Germany. Any suggestion of the possibility of an act of this kind on the part of Great Britain produces the utmost consternation."

The report states that the first twenty-five years of German rule in Southwest Africa was an unbroken record of official bad faith, private oppression, cruelty, barbarities, and robberies, culminating in the Herero and Hottentot rebellions. During the first seventeen years there was no law for the natives. Such protection as the law eventually provided indicated considerations of humanity, but the order to exploit the natives as laborers remained.

Broke Compacts with Natives.

When the Germans first arrived, says the report, they entered into agreements with the native chiefs, but these became scraps of paper and the natives were fraudulently deprived of their best land. Traders and settlers robbed them of their cattle, which was their only wealth, and the law subsequently prevented the natives from possessing large herds of stock.

The natives were thus driven to work at ridiculously inadequate wages and often were never paid. They were treated like slaves and their women folk were habitually maltreated by the Germans, who took them into forced concubinage.

These were some of the things which goaded the natives into rebellion, which was suppressed by ruthless cruelty, resulting practically in the extermination of the three tribes involved. The Hereros were reduced from 80,000 to 15,100, the Hottentots from 20,000 to 9,800, and the Berg-Damaras from 30,000 to 12,800. Thus 80 per cent. of the Herero people disappeared, and more than half of the Hottentots and Berg-Damaras shared the same fate.

How it was done was to supersede the lenient Governor Leutwein by Governor Trotha, fresh from Germany to East Africa, where he had suppressed the Arab rebellion by a wholesale massacre. Governor Trotha issued an "extermination order," the terms of which provided that no Herero man, woman, or child was to receive mercy or quarter.

"Kill every one of them; take no prisoners," he said in the orders. Evidence that the order was only too faithfully carried out is recorded in a story of Governor Trotha's former groom, who described how he once was ordered to kill a young Herero woman. He refused in disgust, whereupon a German soldier showed him how to do it, and then held the dripping bayonet in his face.

Another witness, who was with Governor Trotha two years, testified that he knew of no instance of prisoners being spared. Even after the rebellion surviving natives fared little better.

A Telltale Document.

One of the documents cited in the report is a secret circular by Governor Heitz in 1912 and addressed to magistrates, in which he refers to the desperate feeling becoming prevalent among the natives.

"The reason," he states, "which unanimously is given for this fact is that the brutal excesses of Europeans against natives are alarmingly increasing. It is regrettable that even police officers become guilty of such offenses in a few cases, and that such offenses are not punished by the courts of law in a way that they ought to be according to a sense of justice to the natives."

Acting Secretary Georges supplies sworn statements from natives which give an idea of the reign of terror existing among them. He adds:

"The instances of cruelty, injustice, and barbarism might be multiplied almost indefinitely. Instances of gross bestial conduct which for sheer depravity and immorality are well-nigh unbelievable are also contained in the file of affidavits, but they are hardly fit for publication."

Part two of the report deals at length with the position of the natives before the law. The ordinance governing criminal jurisdiction over the natives contained provisions repugnant to conceptions of justice. The natives were not tried in ordinary courts, but by officers who also did police duties and had authority to delegate their judicial powers to subordinate officials. Imprisonment in chains and flogging were allowed not only for serious crimes, but also as "disciplinary measures," on the application of an employer, or for offenses against the master and servants' law, or for insubordination, continued idleness or neglect of duty.

From the records of German courts it seems clear that native evidence was habitually disregarded and that the natives were not allowed to give evidence on oath. The natives were thus kept in a state of fear. No opportunity of redress was open to them, and they dared not go to the police with complaints. Crimes by Germans, however, against natives were reviewed by the courts.

Gruesome photographs are given in the report of hangings and flogging of natives, and it is asserted that executions were carried out in a manner that would have been considered brutal 200 years ago.

Hanging was a practice with the administrators of native affairs, as also was flogging, which was done with a long sjambok, capable of causing the gravest injury or death, as many as fifty strokes being given at a time.

Ready to Start, but Must Wait.

A great many shoe salesmen are said to have had everything ready to start out on the road this week with their Spring sample lines, but because of the necessity of registering in the new draft have had to postpone their leaving. According to several local factory representatives, this delay may possibly be of more than simply a few days or a week's duration. Though on one seems to know definitely, it was thought that salesmen would have to await classification and that this might take some little time. Meanwhile, customers are being notified of the delay and assured that they will be taken care of at as early a date as possible.

Suit Shades in Waists.

Waists in the various suit shades, such for instance as navy and taupe, are experiencing quite heavy sales, according to reports from several manufacturers in this city. Another favored shade this year, and one which is thought to owe a great deal of its popularity to the vogue for military effects, is bisque. Blouses in this color are particularly well sought for wear with tan and khaki colored suits. Georgette and crêpe de chine are the leading fabrics of the season, though satins and one or two other heavier silks are also wanted. Fringe is being variously employed as trimming with considerable success. Military effects with high collars and metal buttons are lately getting quite some attention.

Won't Make Much Difference.

"There seems to be quite a howl going up in some quarters," said an authority in the local men's wear trade yesterday, "because the ban on sending packages to soldiers in France is not to be lifted permitting the passage of Christmas presents. The burden of the cry now heard seems to be that this will deal a death blow to Christmas trade in men's furnishings. I don't think anything could be more absurd. A man in uniform cannot wear collars, ties, and shirts or even socks and gloves such as we in this trade sell. The ban can make no material difference to us in this respect, and there are still enough men left in the country to give us plenty of business to get along on."

⁂

Dress Goods Show Little Change.

There has been little change in the local dress goods situation of late. The big producers continue in the position of being able to offer nothing for Spring, while in the secondary end of the trade retailers are still marking time, so far as house buying is concerned, because of the heavy advance purchases they made. Interest in the jobbing trade is now centred on getting together lines for the Spring season, and where this is possible at all it is said that they will by no means be evenly balanced. So far as Fall is concerned, the feature is the scarcity of practically all kinds of cloakings. Velours are much in demand, but only a few houses are in a position to supply them.

Raw Silk Prices Firmer.

Save at Yokohama, where quotations fell off a little to the basis of 1,530 yen for Sinshiu No. 1, prices are reported firmer in the various raw silk markets by H. L. Gwalter & Co. of this city. Stocks on hand at Yokohama are estimated at 17,000 to 20,000 bales. Canton silks have gone up about 20 cents a pound since last week, helped by the rise in exchange. The fifth crop there is scarcely half the normal amount, and the sixth crop also will be short. At Shanghai tsatlees and tussahs are stronger in price, due to renewed interest on the part of American buyers. The decline in lire exchange has upset the Milan market, and many dealers there are said to be facing sharp losses on recent cocoon purchases as a result. Local trading is confined largely to the buying of filling-in lots.

Little Gray Goods Trading.

Business continued light in the local gray goods market yesterday, more attention being given to registration for the selective draft than to the buying and selling of goods. In fact, some houses were closed all day, or in part, in order to give their employes plenty of time to comply with the registration requirements. In the attempts there were to do business, buyers again were more willing to trade than sellers, and it is doubtful if the business actually put through would have been much larger than it was even if military matters had not held the centre of the stage to the extent they did.

"Floor Sale" Was a Success.

The first "floor sale" of raw furs ever held in this city, which took place on Wednesday at the warehouse of J. L. Prouty's Sons, Inc., 382 West Broadway, was well received by the trade. There were more than seventy-five successful bidders for the ninety-eight lots catalogued, and prices paid were said to be generally good. A sample was the figure paid for two lots of 1,500 black muskrats, each lot bringing $2,700, or an average of $1.80 per skin. This price was said yesterday to be very high. The best demand was for beaver, marten, blue fox, white fox, skunk, and muskrat. It is expected that the next floor sale will be held some time after the forthcoming annual Fall auction of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, which will take place in Masonic Hall here in the week beginning Sept. 23.

duration. Though no one sems to know nature are in good demand, and several quite distinctive style features predominate. Among these the round collarless neck plays a conspicuous part and is seen a great deal in serge or satin frocks, the bodice and sleeves of which are frequently quite tightfitting and demi-tailored. On such garments a straight row of buttons set very close together down the back from neck to waistline is popular. Quite a few serge frocks are finished off with satin trimming, including a wide girdle of satin tied in a large bow in back. Navy blue and black are the leading shades and they are sometimes accentuated by means of piping and hand embroidery in deep rich colors.

Maximum Prices for Clips.

The recent classification of new clips on which maximum prices have been established being found not clear to the cutting-up trade, this list of grades and prices has been issued by A. L. Gifford, Rag and Fiber Administrator: Men's black and blue worsteds, free from cotton warps, 48 cents a pound; fine clothing house suiting clips, no cotton warps, 39 cents; fine merchant tailor clips, no cotton warps, 38 cents; medium clothing house suiting clips, no cotton warps, 37 cents; ordinary clothing house clips, including cotton warps, 22 cents; all-wool overcoatings, 23 cents; medium overcoatings, no cotton warps, 20 cents; all-wool mackinaws, 17 cents; mixed overcoatings, including cotton warps, 10 cents; cotton warp clothing clips, 5 cents. In women's wear these prices are listed: Fine cloak and suit house mixed clips, including serges, velours, broadcloths, and flannels, 33 cents; same, not including serges, 25 cents; all-wool flannels and velours, 25 cents; all-wool mixed serges, 40 cents; all-wool cloakings, 20 cents; cotton-warp serges, 8 cents, and cotton-warp cloak and suit clips, 5 cents. No cutter-up is permitted to sell clips at prices higher than those quoted.

MERCANTILE MARINE EARNS $12,171,541

NET INCOME CUT IN HALF

The International Mercantile Marine Company's complete report for 1917, to be issued today, which covers the operations of the ships directly owned and in subsidiary concerns, shows a number of changes from the preliminary statement made public at the annual meeting in June. The gross income, after allowing for British excess profits taxes, was $60,027,266, an increase of $2,772,448 over the estimated total. Operating expenses, including United States income and excess profits taxes and British income tax, amounted to $41,188,378, an increase of $1,597,730 over the estimated outlay, and the net revenue of $12,171,541 was $1,100,998 larger.

In comparison with the preceding year the gross income showed a decline of more than $28,000,000, while expenses and taxes were about $14,000,000 lower and the net showed a decline of $13,856,000, or more than 50 per cent. The salient features of the 1917 statement, compared with 1916, are presented in this table:

Oper. exp., taxes, &c.	41,188,378	55,061,353
Interest	2,362,840	3,191,588
Depreciation of ships	4,304,505	4,169,488
Net income	12,171,541	26,027,295

Details Income Account.

The foregoing report includes the earnings of vessels directly operated by the company, together with income of subsidiaries of which the capital stock is owned in entirety by the Mercantile Marine Company, except Frederick Leyland & Co., of which 42 per cent. of the preferred and 98 per cent. of the common stock is held in the Marine Company's treasury. As the holding company has as its own income the earnings of its own ships and the dividends declared by the controlled concerns, the income account of the parent corporation contains results somewhat different from those cited. The income account and chief features of the balance sheet are set down in this tabulation:

INCOME ACCOUNT.

Common Stock Earns 17.3 Per Cent.

The balance of $11,753,508 available for dividends was equal to 17.3 per cent. on the common stock after allowing for the preferred dividend payments. In the preceding year more than 35 per cent. was earned on the common stock. The statement indicated a strong cash position, the amount being considerably more than twice as much as a year before, while the working capital also displayed a considerable gain at the end of 1917 over the total twelve months before. The report said that the $1,800,000 Second Liberty Loan and $1,500,000 Third Loan bonds subscribed for when the offerings were made were still held by the company or its subsidiaries, while the $600,000 of the first loan had been disposed of at par.

The report threw light on some of the liquid assets of the Leyland Company, saying that its marketable stocks and bonds on Dec. 31 had a value of $22,522,937 and its cash totaled $15,065,088, the latter item being larger than the cash held by the parent organization. The two companies together had securities and cash to a total of $76,773,670, but against this stood $11,324,987 due for taxes and $34,350,000 representing British steamers lost or sold which must be replaced.

The report, signed by Harold A. Sanderson, Chairman, and P. A. S. Franklin, President, goes into considerable detail of the year's business, but makes no mention of the negotiations now in progress for the sale of the Marine Company's existing British tonnage. The chief items of the account of 1917 operations are a repetition of the statements by Mr. Franklin at the annual meeting, noting that the year stood in contrast with 1916, a record period for earnings, and also that the whole of the company's tonnage had been requisitioned by the several Allied Governments. The fact that Government operation succeeded private operation of the ships, the report says, accounts largely for the falling off of earnings.

"The difficulties of maintaining the steamers in the highest state of efficiency, owing to the exigencies of war," the report states, "have continued to increase, but the Directors are pleased to record that everything possible has been done in this important direction and that all the steamers are in a satisfactory working condition. The cost of operating steamers during the year increased beyond all expectation and expenditures for labor, supplies and equipment of every kind continues to increase and are limited only by the requirements and necessities of the world situation resulting from the prolongation of the war."

LONDON WATER BILLS SOLD.

Tenders for £1,300,000 Issue Reach Total of £5,283,000.

Cables from London announced yesterday that tenders for the £1,300,000 issue of one-year Metropolitan Water Board of London one-year bills totaled £5,283,000. The average discount rate of the allotments was slightly less than 3 11-16 per cent.

The £1,300,000 issue of one-year Metropolitan Water Board bills has been sold to repay $6,300,000 of one-year discount bills sold in this country last year, which mature next Wednesday. A syndicate composed of the Guaranty Trust Company, the National City Bank, William A. Read & Co., and Bernhard, Scholle & Co., sold $6,300,000 of the bills on a 7 per cent. basis last September. Last year's sale was to refund a similar issue put out by Bernhard, Scholle & Co. and the Guaranty Trust Company in 1916 on a 6 per cent. basis.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

Money Plentiful and Discount Rates Are Quiet.

LONDON, Sept. 12.—The stock market maintained a good tone and displayed increased strength today. Gilt-edged securities, under the lead of consols, advanced, and iron, steel, shipping, and West African mining shares hardened. Otherwise the dealings were moderate at steady prices.

Money was more plentiful and discount rates were quiet.

PRESIDENT TO END WAR PLANT STRIKES

WARNS BRIDGEPORT MEN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—President Wilson is understood to have determined to adopt a vigorous industrial control program for dealing with the war labor situations at Bridgeport and elsewhere the moment events at important munition plants are regarded by him as justifying such action.

The whole situation as involved in conditions at Bridgeport and Bethlehem was canvassed this afternoon in a conference between members of the War Labor Board and representatives of those branches of the Government whose war plans would be seriously crippled by strikes in munition plants. After this conference recommendations were made to the President on the basis of which, it is understood, he is prepared to act in the enforcement of a very definite program to the extent that events seem to justify it.

This program will be applicable to both employers and employes who refuse to abide by the awards of the War Labor Board. There will be an announcement of the President's program made from the White House very soon, probably tomorrow morning, in a statement based on the Bridgeport case.

From what could be gathered tonight, following the conference at the headquarters of the War Labor Board, the industrial control program which the President represented as favoring, may go as far as Government operation of plants where employes refuse to abide by the Board's awards and application of the "work or fight" order to those employes who refuse to yield to these awards.

Has Plenty of Authority.

The President has the authority, under the National Defense Act, to take over and operate plants engaged on war contracts, and it is said that Mr. Wilson will not hesitate to take this action wherever events are regarded by him as justifying such action. The statement was made that the President was not disposed to permit the war work of the Government to be halted by such a situation as that which has been threatened at Bridgeport, and that he feels that the time has come for very positive action.

Four thousand machinists are involved in the Bridgeport situation. The President has been informed that both the employes and the employers there have refused to abide by the award made by the War Labor Board. The machinists have defied both the Board and the heads of their own unions, refusing to abide by an ultimatum served by their own labor leaders.

The firm of Smith & Wesson has declined to accept an award made by the Board and, rather than accept, has offered to turn its plant over to the Government for operation.

The other situation that has bothered the Federal Government is involving workers of the Bethlehem Steel Company. The status of this case is in doubt tonight, no definite reply having been received from the company to a telegram sent to President Eugene C. Grace last night asking for a statement of his attitude to the Government.

Bridgeport Strike Near Collapse.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 12.—The machinists' strike against the acceptance of the award of the War Labor Board is on the verge of a collapse tonight because it is understood at labor headquarters that President Wilson had called on the men as loyal citizens to go back to work.

Business Agent Samuel Lavit had not received the proclamation of President Wilson at a late hour tonight, but had been informed by W. H. Johnston of the International Association of Machinists at Washington that the President had sent on the proclamation.

"I have seen in the newspapers that the President will ask the machinists to go back to work and abide by the Eidlitz award," said Lavit, "but outside of that I don't know the contents of the proclamation."

"Will the men go back to work if the President so orders?" was asked.

"That will have to be decided by the rank and file at the meeting tomorrow afternoon," he replied.

FREE SPEECH DOES NOT PROTECT DISLOYALTY

U. S. Judge Tells Bolsheviki They Know as Little of Freedom as a Billy Goat Knows of Gospel.

Six men and one woman, all followers of Lenine and Trotzky, were indicted in the Federal Court yesterday for conspiracy to violate the espionage law by publishing a Bolshevist circular containing scurrilous references to President Wilson. Those indicted were Gabriel Prober, Jacob Abrams, Jacob Schwartz, Samuel Lipman, Hyman Rozansky, Hyman Lachowsky, and Mollie Stimer.

The prisoners were arraigned before United States Judge Henry D. Clayton of Alabama, now sitting in New York by special designation. When arraigned Miss Stimer addressed the court and intimated that her indictment was an effort on the part of the Government to "stifle free speech."

"Freedom of speech," said Judge Clayton, "is one thing and disloyalty is another. What you term free speech does not protect disloyalty. I am sorry for the people of New York that have to deal with individuals who have no more conception of what free government means than a billy goat has of the gospel."

Judge Clayton added that when in Congress he had voted to restrict immigration and that he was now satisfied that he voted right on that question.

Assistant United States District Attorney Charles W. Atwater asked that bail be fixed at $10,000 for each defendant. This was objected to by Harry Weinberger, who was counsel for Emma Goldman, Alexander Berkman, and other anarchists, and who appeared yesterday for the prisoners.

"This court," said Judge Clayton in fixing bail, "is not going to follow the example of the Bolsheviki, which appears to have a half-baked idea of government composed of socialism and nihilism. I will therefore set the bonds of the defendants at half the amount asked by the Government, and if there are any German propagandists still left in this city the prisoners should have little trouble getting bondsmen. And I want to say that when this war is over the United States will be the principal agency in assisting the Russian people to attain an orderly form of government."

INDORSES UNITED WAR WORK

An indorsement of the United War Work campaign to be held in November to raise $170,000,000, to be divided among the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, the Jewish Welfare Board, the Salvation Army, the War Camp Community Service, the Library Fund, and other agencies working among the soldiers in France, was given out last night by William J. Mulligan, Chairman of the Knights of Columbus Committee on War Activities, and James A. Flaherty, the Supreme Knight.

The statement said all Catholics would unite for the success of the drive and would exert efforts to help every other agency working for the welfare of the soldiers. Mr. Mulligan said that he rejoiced that "religious questions have been cast aside, that racial questions have been forgotten, and that men and women of America are united in the great work of helping the American soldiers and sailors."

NEARING OPPOSED BY SOME SOCIALISTS

WANTS DECISIVE VICTORY

James G. Phelps Stokes Says Socialist Party as an Organization Is Not One Per Cent. Loyal.

Not all the Socialists in this city will subscribe to the declaration of principles enunciated by Scott Nearing at the meeting held in Webster Hall on Wednesday night to ratify his nomination for Congress in the Fourteenth District. Allan L. Benson, the Socialist Party's nominee for President in 1916, will not, and neither will James G. Phelps Stokes, who is now a Sergeant in the 9th Coast Artillery.

"Scott Nearing, in my opinion," said Mr. Benson at his office in Yonkers, "is an idealist. Nearing didn't mean to be anything like as confiscatory as he reads. When he talks about the producing classes taking possession of the instrumentalities of production, of the banks, the railroads, and what not, he means Government ownership, and is enunciating an old Socialist principle.

"As for sending an American Socialist delegation to a conference of Socialist and labor delegates from the warring countries, and as for this Government taking immediate steps to conclude Nearing's 'early, democratic and permanent peace,' count me out. I am unqualifiedly for winning this war and for a peace that will follow a decisive allied victory."

Mr. Stokes dictated a statement of what he thought of the Nearing declaration, a part of which follows:

"That the people of the United States, who with few exceptions are useful working people, should control their own affairs, industrially as well as politically, I, of course, believe, but such control should, of course, be achieved by the means of democracy. I am confident that what Scott Nearing meant to say was that industrial exploitation of the type that involves robbery or oppression of the working people must be stopped in democratic ways, and that the masses of the people, who are the workers, should not permit small groups, actuated by selfish interests, to dominate their affairs.

"The American people, I am convinced, will give increasing support to our present Government in its course of taking over one great essential industry after another for public use in the interest of all the people. If anybody said at that meeting that the Socialist Party doesn't pretend to be 100 per cent. loyal to our Government at the present time, who ever said that spoke the complete truth. As I understand the Socialist Party, it, as an organization, is not even 1 per cent. loyal either to this country or to the American people's ideals of democracy.

"The working people of America never had any group in Government or outside of it working more earnestly or more intelligently to promote justice for all than that group is doing which now administers the affairs of this nation at Washington. Nor have the working people of America ever had an abler or truer leader or one more determined or more able to secure fair play for all than President Wilson."

BOND EXEMPTION BILL REPORTED TO HOUSE

No Opposition to Measure in Ways and Means Committee—Passage Today Expected.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—After a brief hearing today by the Ways and Means Committee the Administration bill to extend tax exemption on Liberty bonds was favorably reported to the House by Chairman Kitchin. There was no opposition to the measure and indications are that it will be passed by the House tomorrow.

In his report Mr. Kitchin quoted the letter in regard to the bill sent to him by Secretary McAdoo and then proceeded to analyze the measure. He said the Ways and Means Committee had informally discussed the advisability of such legislation, but had waited for word from Secretary McAdoo before acting.

ORDERS INCREASED SERVICE

The Public Service Commission yesterday ordered the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to increase the non-rush subway service in Broadway, Manhattan, 33 per cent. For some time the company has been running trains every four minutes, and there has been much complaint about the service. Public Service Commissioner F. J. H. Kracke held several conferences with John J. Dempsey, Vice President and General Manager of the company.

Observations made by Kracke and reports from the commission's inspectors were discussed and it was generally admitted that the service could and should be improved. The new order requires the company to operate twenty trains an hour on a three minute headway. Close observations will continue to be made by the commission, and if this increased service also proves to be inadequate another order, adding more trains, will be made.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Directors of the Chatham and Phenix National Bank yesterday elected William Milne, formerly President of the People's Bank, a Director, and elected John B. Forsyth, formerly Cashier of the People's Bank, a Vice President. The usual quarterly dividend of $3 per share was declared at the Directors' meeting, payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 20.

Albert C. Fuchs was appointed Cashier of the Commonwealth Bank yesterday to succeed the late John Burckhardt. Mr. Fuchs was formerly Assistant Cashier and was succeeded in that place by George F. A. Oldt.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 13,734 packages. Fair trading and prices a little higher on choice and fancy grades of creamery. Medium qualities steady to firm, but trade not quite so active. Renovated scarce and higher. Ladles and packing stock firmly maintained. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 54@54½c; extras, 92 score, 53@53½c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 49@52½c; seconds, 45@48½c; thirds, 43@44½c.; unsalted, higher than extras, 55½@56c; extras, 54½@55c; firsts, 51@54c; seconds, 47@50c; State dairy tubs, finest, 52@52½c; good to prime, 48½@51c; common to fair, 41@48c; renovated extras, 45½@46c; firsts, 43½@44½c; lower grades, 40@42½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 41½@42c; ladles, current make, firsts, 38½@39½c; seconds, 37@37½c; lower grades, 35@36½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 37c; No. 2, 36@36½c; lower grades, 33@35½c.

EGGS.—20,346 packages. The situation generally unchanged. There is a fair movement, but arrivals are liberal. Medium grades are dull, and there is still rather a burdensome accumulation of these. Very high qualities showing a large and uniform proportion of high-grade eggs are in relatively light supply and steady. Buyers are very careful when paying top quotations. Many individual marks have to be sold lower than prices obtained for them a short time ago, although the range of prices of prime grades is without material change. Storage eggs continue in pretty good demand and held firmly. Fancy new laid nearby whites eggs meet fair demand, but there are comparatively few such, and the larger part of the supply, consisting of more or less defective qualities, drags heavily at a wide range of easy prices. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 51@52c; extra firsts, 48@50c; firsts, 44@47c; seconds and poorer, 35@43c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 37@39c; No. 2 and poorers, 30@36c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice dry, 33@35c; undergrades, 26@32c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, charges paid, 43@44½c; firsts, charges paid, 42@43½c; seconds, charges paid, 40@42c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 64@68c; ordinary to prime, 45@63c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 45@63c; Pacific Coast whites, firsts to finest, 60@62c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 42@60c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 54@56c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 40@52c.

TO CHANGE TEUTON STATUE.

Germania on the Custom House Will Become Belgium.

Cass Gilbert, the architect who designed the Custom House, said yesterday that he had been authorized by Secretary McAdoo to remove all German insignia from the statue of Germany above the main cornice of the Government building. The statue, which is one of twelve facing Bowling Green, and stands third from the west end of the cornice, was erected at the time the Custom House was completed. Germania, along with the eleven other statues, represented the nations of ancient and modern times which have had an important commerce at sea.

Mr. Gilbert said that a scaffolding would be erected within a few days, and work started to change the statue to a figure depicting Belgium. At present Germania bears upon her breastplate the emblem of the German eagle and on a shield at the side of the figure is carved the word "Kiel" and the initials "W. II." in the form of a monogram. The insignia are scarcely noticeable from the street, but Secretary McAdoo decided the statue was out of place on a Federal building.

Mr. Gilbert said that the President of the National Sculpture Society had been asked to act in an advisory capacity as to the modifications to be made. The statue will not be removed, but the word "Kiel" and the initials "W. II." now appearing on the shield will be taken off. The Belgian lion and the word "Belgium" will be substituted upon the shield.

UNION LEAGUE GIVES YACHT

It was announced that the steam yacht donated by the club to the officers of the army and navy stationed around New York, with headquarters at Swinburne Island, is now in commission. The yacht is named Union League Club.

HAYS DENIES WORDS QUOTED BY TUMULTY

SECRETARY MAKES RETORT

Quotes Republican Speakers Who, He Says, Strive to Keep Politics in the War.

Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, sent his reply yesterday to a communication from Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to President Wilson, in which the Secretary asked Mr. Hays if in a recent address before the Association of Republican State Chairmen in Chicago he had used the following language:

"The Democratic leaders at Washington would not stop at anything that they believed would insure the re-election of a Democratic Congress this Fall. They would even end the war with any kind of compromise if that would insure the continuance of the Democratic Party in power."

Mr. Hays in his reply denied that he had used the language embodied in the communication from Secretary Tumulty, and quoted at length from what he declared was the language used by him in addressing the State Chairmen of his party. In the quoted utterances were embodied a blunt charge that the Democratic leaders had used the war for partisan purposes and a plea that both parties co-operate to the end that the war may be kept out of politics, and that no charges of disloyalty be made by either Republicans or Democrats in the campaign this Fall. Here is the letter of Chairman Hays:

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12, 1918.
Hon. Joseph P. Tumulty, White House,
Washington, D. C.:

Dear Mr. Tumulty: I have your telegram. On Sept. 2, in Chicago, I attended a meeting of the Association of Republican State Chairmen, called by its President, and attended by fifteen of such Chairmen. At that meeting I made remarks referring in a general way to the length to which Democratic leaders were going in their efforts to control the Senate and House, and also as to the irrevocable stand of the Republican Party for a vigorous prosecution of the war and against an inconclusive peace.

Did Not Use Quotation.

I did not use the words quoted in your telegram. What I said then, which I now reaffirm and which I shall continue to declare, was substantially as follows:

First, as to the means resorted to by certain Democratic leaders to get votes, I said: "In the special election in Wisconsin the Democratic machine leaders published advertisements, undenied since by them, addressed to the soldiers at Camp Grant, as follows:

> To the Wisconsin Soldiers at Camp Grant: Tuesday, April 2, you are entitled to vote for United States Senator from Wisconsin to succeed Senator Paul O. Husting. President Wilson, your Commander in Chief, desires all loyal Americans to vote for Joseph E. Davies for United States Senator. Davies's election means joy at Washington and gloom at Berlin. Davies's defeat means gloom at Washington and joy at Berlin.

I regard this as an infamous prostitution of all patriotic proprieties and the grossest violation of the plainest civil duty, worthy of the severest condemnation of all Americans. In this crisis, when all patriots are striving to bring to the aid of the country's cause every resource in men and material, when thousands of Republican and Democratic boys are dying, side by side, when both political parties are loyal, such conduct is immeasurably reprehensible. From such action it is evident, and I regret to say it, that these Democratic leaders will go to any length to carry the Senate and House. Such unpatriotic efforts to use the war for partisan purposes must fail. Such inevitable failure was indicated by the Wisconsin result, it was further shown in the Michigan primary, and it will be conclusively proven in the Maine election next week. The American people will not tolerate it. This is the war of no political party. This is the people's war, and we demand that the war be kept out of partisan politics, and that partisanship be kept out of the war. And what we ask from the party in power we irrevocably pledge for ourselves.

Second, as to the imperative necessity of a vigorous prosecution of the war and a conclusive peace only, and the need of a Republican Congress to that end, and in connection with a discussion of the candidacy of Mr. Ford in the Republican primary in Michigan and his statement as to why he became a candidate, and while reviewing the service Republicans in Congress rendered the major war measures which were opposed by the Democratic leaders, Chairman Dent of the Military Affairs Committee, Floor Leader Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and others, I said:

"We demand the most vigorous prosecution of the war and a peace with victory. A Republican Congress means a War Congress, and we pledge our candidates to be men who are supremely pro-American, who will give the country's all for the winning of the war now, and who will stand irrevocably against any peace based on a compromise of principles which would violate American rights, interests and honor, and make of our sacrifice a sacrilege to be made again by our grandchildren. I hope and trust the Democratic Party will work by the same token."

Appeal to Bar Partisanship.

Recognizing as we all do that there will always be politics, I am pleased to advise you what I said to these Republican State Chairmen, because I insist that our politics be open and acknowledged and on a plane and of a character that needs no subterfuge, and that there be no political partisanship in anything that touches the war.

Further, I now take the opportunity to appeal to you directly and to the Democratic organization, as I long ago did in my reply to Colonel George Harvey's letter, to join with us in this effort to keep partisanship out of the war and the war out of partisan politics. This is no time for little things. The world is on fire. Our duty to our soldiers, measured by their marvelous accomplishments and their supreme service, the magnitude of the task ahead for us all, and the incalculable consequence of the result, all cry out for the fullest co-operation. Let not political parties spend their time accusing each other of disloyalty when both are loyal. I urge that there be no accusation of disloyalty from either one side or the other in this campaign. Such accusation will give a totally false impression to the enemy, and the party or the committee making such accusation will be guilty in that very act of the worst kind of disloyalty.

We have a heavy load to haul. Let us, as far as possible, hitch up both our great political horses and have them both used, unhampered, freely to pull this load, each striving to see which can pull the harder.

Sincerely yours,
WILL H. HAYS.

Mr. Hays was in Washington yesterday, but is expected back in this city today. His letter to Secretary Tumulty was made public at the headquarters of the Republican National Committee in the Knox Building at Fortieth Street and Fifth Avenue.

TUMULTY STILL IN DOUBT HE DECLARES TO HAYS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Secretary Tumulty tonight sent the following reply to Chairman Hays:

Washington, Sept. 12, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Hays: I am very glad indeed to have your disclaimer. Although I observed in one of the Washington morning papers an acknowledgment by Republic Chairman Motter of Kansas that he had given to the press in that State the interview to which I called your attention, I prefer to accept your own explanation.

The general trend of your letter, however, still leaves doubt in my mind as to the responsiveness of some of the Republican managers to the clearly implied desire of the American people to keep politics out of the war. While the whole thought of President Wilson has been given to the successful prosecution of the war, the foremost leaders of the Republican Party, including yourself and Senator Penrose, have been making fervent arguments in favor of a restoration of the old political control of the nation. I have in mind your obviously partisan statement in THE NEW YORK TIMES of a short time ago, wherein you said: "Our coming political activity is not to be lessened. On the contrary, what we want in this country is not 'less politics,' but more attention to politics."

Also I recall a recent speech you made in Philadelphia in which you said: "We will bring the Government back to the limitations and principles of the Constitution in time of peace, and establish policies which will again bind up the wounds of war, renew our prosperity, administer the affairs of the Government with the greatest economy, enlarge our strength at home and abroad, prevent the further spread of the socialistic tendency of the times toward Federal ownership of all the creation and distribution of wealth as a panacea for all the real and fancied ills of society and put the nation's feet once more firmly on the path of progress."

Quotes Senator Penrose.

I doubt whether the remarks which I have quoted can be interpreted in any other way than as an implied criticism of some of the necessary war policies of the Government, which you claim the Republican Party, as a minority, supported in Congress, and which, you plainly indicate, they would overturn if returned as a majority in Congress. A similar political speech by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania makes this assumption of your meaning inevitable. He said:

"I want to say to the Republican Party: Keep it vigorous and virile all through the United States, successful whenever it can be successful and, if under the guidance of the Chairman of the National Committee, we can secure a Republican majority in the House of Representatives at Washington, I believe that we have reached a point in the development of the situation when it will be best to replace the Democratic Party for military improvement and economical efficiency. We are all pulling together in order to stop the war as soon as we possibly can stop it, and then, Mr. Chairman, over and above all, the people by an overwhelming vote will vote the Republican Party in control of the American people, as the country has never prospered economically unless it has been under Republican control. Let us keep up an efficient organization in Pennsylvania and all through the United States and make a successful Republican contest at every opportunity in every Congressional District and at the next Presidential election, and endeavor to assure the election of Republican candidates."

Even more partisan was the speech of George Wickersham, formerly Attorney General of the United States, some weeks ago at a Republican meeting at Lancaster, Penn. He was quoted in The Lancaster Intelligencer as follows: "See to it that you elect Republican Congressmen, Congressmen who will not be at the beck and call of the President. Also see to it that the Republican Congressmen who acquiesced in what the President wanted in the last two years are retired."

President's War Aims Stated.

"I am afraid that your quoted speeches, the speech of Senator Penrose, and your letter of today, indicate all too plainly that some Republicans find it difficult to think outside the realm of politics. The vast body of Republican voters, now standing with all Democratic voters, stanchly behind their Government, doubtless will be interested in any statement you might care to make as to how far you would go in repealing the laws which have made America's participation in the war so effective.

The President's war aims have been made the aims of all the nations fighting against the German Government. These aims have been stated unequivocally by the President upon a number of occasions since the war began. Not merely the American people but all the world is familiar with these aims which assure "force without stint" until victory is achieved.

It is only through the subtle insinuations that characterize partisan politics, that these aims might be diluted with any doubt. It is quite obviously partisan and gratuitous for you to refer to 'the imperative necessity of a vigorous prosecution of the war and a conclusive peace only and the need of a Republican Congress to that end." That this reference was not an inadvertence is shown by the speech of Congressman S. D. Fess, Chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee, wherein he said: "Republican success will not only insure the most vigorous prosecution of the war, but it will be a guarantee against a compromise and, therefore, an inconclusive peace, a peace without victory but a peace with an assurance of a definite peace dictated by victory on the field."

These statements with reference to an "inconclusive peace" by yourself and Mr. Fess can be regarded either in the light of straw men raised up to be knocked down, or as efforts to introduce doubt into a decision which the Government has already announced and upon which the American people are agreed.

Very truly yours,
JOSEPH P. TUMULTY.

Buy W. S. S. to Defend Old Age and Old Glory

Is there any Excuse for Incompetency These Days?

At the Service of the Gillette owner—Free. Gillette Experts are coming here again to serve you.

It may be merely a hint you need—or perhaps a touch of adjustment to your razor. No charge for this service.

PERHAPS not every Gillette user knows how much service his Gillette can give him.

They will be here beginning next Monday. They will be at your service in the stores of Gillette Dealers convenient to every part of the city.

Be sure to see them. It will take only a few minutes and it will be well worth while.

THERE may be some "little knack" of using your Gillette you never thought of.

Perhaps you have dropped your razor—knocked it out of alignment. Maybe it is old and worn.

So when you come in, bring your Gillette in with you. It will not cost you anything to have it looked over, and adjusted if necessary.

* * *

It saves a man's time. It saves him fees and tips—frees his odd quarters for U. S. Thrift Stamps or another Liberty Bond.

Are You Getting Maximum Results From Your Gillette

The Gillette Service Experts and all Gillette dealers want to be of service to every Gillette user.

They will show you that "little knack" of the Gillette shave—how to prepare the face for shaving; the correct angle-stroke; the adjustment for a light or a close shave.

Bring in your Gillette, have it looked over. It may be damaged, bent, out of alignment. If so, they will put it in first-class condition again, free of charge. They may make some valuable suggestions, anyway.

When you shave tomorrow morning try this—

Put in a new blade and screw the handle down tight. Then, if you want a specially close shave, unscrew the handle a slight turn.

Hold the razor naturally and easily, and tilt the handle so you can just feel the blade engage the beard.

(Here's where some men make a mistake. They tilt the handle up or down too much.)

Then shave with short, slanting strokes.

Keep the edge of the blade as nearly flat against the skin as you can. Any man will catch the "little knack" of using his Gillette in one or two shaves. In fact, when the Gillette is properly used, the beard slips off without your knowing it.
